DEATH BY STEREO!

JIMMY JELLINEK
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

I recently took stereo equipment from our gear room and created a veritable wall of sound. Five speakers are currently stacked on my desk, along with a bazooka bass cannon that rattles the entire wall when it's turned up to 11. It's like a booming Oldsmobile idling in front of my desk. I set up the system as the solution to a sound clash with the fashion department, which has a love for Elton John. All was fine until I found myself singing along to "Daniel" while one of our editors rocked back in his chair, closed his eyes and did the same. That's bad. Corrective measures needed to be taken. Thus, the wall of sound was born and began immediately pumping out Biggie Smalls at brain-rattling volume. I just wanted to tell you this as a way of demonstrating the transformative powers of high-end stereo componentry. Not only does it make everything sound like you're in Diddy's living room, but it can also heal whatever doubts you have about your masculinity when faced with an Elton John–like crisis of your own. Now the small, AM-radio pleasures of "Tiny Dancer" are dwarfed by the 10,000 kilowatts of Slayer driving everybody insane—and deaf.

Anyway, get ready for a staggeringly awesome issue. We've got fast cars, rich girls and expensive, shiny things for you to blow your bonus on. And if you got stiffed by your dickhead boss, just say screw it—get a wall of sound of your own and start cranking. Or just stare at Stacy Keibler for a while; she'll ease your pain. All in all, you'll be living fine. See ya.

WHEEL OF SHAME!

BECAUSE EVERYONE'S DIGNITY IS FOR SALE.

1 THE BEGGAR ONE-MAN BAND

Dear Stuff,
Freshman year, I started a band with the intention of rocking out of this hellhole. But recently, the rest of the band "removed" me, and the amp I had blew out! Now I'm stuck living in a house with ex-bandmates I don't speak to, and I've got nothing to start a new band with! I will do anything for some gear and a reason not to off myself in this miserable town! Please help me, Stuff!
Johnny Duggan
Indiana, Pennsylvania

2 THE CHALLENGE RUINED NAME

Your sob story has tugged our heartstrings, but our lighter isn't in the air just yet. We gave the Wheel of Shame a whirl and it landed on Ruined Name. So, to complete the deal, you must re-create the Who's The Who Sell Out album cover by submerging yourself in a bathtub filled with beans. Don't worry; we're sure your dickhead roommates won't mind the clogged tub.

3 THE EVIDENCE BEAN BATH

Bean rain proved messy and delicious.

"Um, stay away from the big brown beans at the bottom."

"If only I were sitting in a tub filled with weenies."

PASSED!

4 THE REWARD LINE 6 FLEXTONE III PLUS

You rock, and therefore we salute you! Plug into this Flextone III Plus ($840, courtesy of Guitar Center and Line 6). Its 32 amp tone effects will allow your sound to go from B.B. King to P.O.D. Groupies aren't included, but Line 6's A.I.R. II direct recording technology makes laying down tracks so easy, all you'll have to do is show up. Check it out at guitarcenter.com.

WHO'S NEXT?

Want to spin the wheel? Send an e-mail to stufflive@stuffmagazine.com (subject: Wheel of Shame) and tell us what you want and why. We might make your dream come true...for a price.

MINI Traveller Concept Car

Gaze into the future and see a tiny ride.

This winter-themed MINI concept car has plenty of storage for skis, boots and the carcass of the Yeti you bagged during that biathlon mishap. But then things take a turn toward the ridiculous: A blood-pressure monitor tracks your heart rate through sensors in the steering wheel, and an aromatherapy machine switches among four scents, depending on your speed and music preference. There's also a unique floating design, with front seats that swivel around so you can smack annoying backseat drivers. Now there's a concept we can get behind.

Best Frat Pledge Replacement Helping Hands monkeys.

Wouldn't it be great if you had your own personal assistant to turn on the lights and wipe your ass? Helping Hands, a Boston-based non-profit organization, trains capuchin monkeys to help with domestic activities. Even though it costs more than $25,000 to train each monkey, the organization gives them out for free. But since Helping Hands doles out its simian slaves only to people who are paralyzed, getting one will cost you an arm and a leg—or all four of them. helpinghandsmonkeys.org

ALBUM OF THE MONTH

ELBOW

Leaders of the Free World V2

So, the last Coldplay album sucked. But that's OK, because those guys are a bunch of whiny wankers anyway. Elbow, on the other hand, are Radiohead biters we'll gladly get behind. On their third disc, the cheeky Brits set their sights on something bigger than Thom Yorke's audience. On the title track, lead singer Guy Garvey moans, "Passing the gun from father to feckless son/We're climbing a landslide where only the good die young." Wonder which world leader he's talking about! But regardless of their political bent (or their Billy Joel–lyric cribbing—bad form!), Elbow rock. "Mexican Standoff" explodes with choirs while changing tempos from fast to slow with grace…unlike, say, Chris Martin when he's getting busy with Gwyneth. Or so we hear.

Elbow's first album was nominated for the Nationwide Mercury Prize in 2001.

READY TO RUMBLE

WHO'S YOUR NANNY?

They cared for us and coddled us. They made us soup when we were sick, gave us advice after tough breakups and didn't rat us out to our parents when we stumbled home drunk that time. The question remains, however: Who was the greatest nanny of them all? In honor of the DVD releases of Charles in Charge and Gimme a Break!, we present the bone-crunching Nanny Royale. Will Mr. Belvedere drop-kick Benson's ass? Will Tony Micelli knock the Nanny on her fanny? Our bet is Charles will, true to form, remain in charge.

Hmmm, a threesome with Mrs. Garrett and the Nanny never occurred to us before...

THIS MONTH'S WINNER! KIMBERLY

AGE: 23
HOMETOWN: Hyde Park, New York
OCCUPATION: Student
Hot-chick trifecta: "People say I look like Pamela Anderson, Carmen Electra and Fergie—none of whom look anything alike. It's flattering, but I don't see it."
Keeps the doctor away: "I think plastic surgery is disgusting. It's self-mutilation, basically. Staying healthy, being fit—that's what's most important. I'm not going to mutilate my body just so guys get horny when they look at me."
Youth gone wild: "I was out of control in high school. We used to throw keg parties when my mom was sleeping. I dropped out for a while, then I said, 'I need to get my shit together.'"
Couch-potato pleaser: "I usually don't dig the fitness type. I'm not that shallow—I'm more into personality. Some guys don't look good, but if you get to know them, they look a lot better than they did."

18 Arctic Monkeys
The next band to love.

Another hype beast from the U.K.—what a shocker! Arctic Monkeys have garnered buzz thanks to Internet freaks going bananas over their sound, and they've sold out two dates in New York City even though most people have only heard their one quasi-hit, the upbeat "I Bet You Look Good on the Dancefloor." Their debut album, Whatever People Say I Am, That's What I'm Not, is out February 21 on Domino Records, so go buy it. arcticmonkeys.com

14 CMT Rolls Out Trick My Truck

Pimp My Ride gets a redneck makeover.

Trick My Truck (premiering February 3 on CMT) delivers reality TV for the non-vagina'd set. The custom crew Chrome Shop Mafia scours the truck stops of America in search of beat-up rigs, steals them and pimps the mud-encrusted pieces of shit beyond recognition before giving them back to their tearful owners. It's enough to make you wanna yell "Yee-haw!" and litter your lawn with broken appliances.

Whether you know it or not, power chords—two-note guitar chords so simple even flannel-wrapped retards from Seattle could play them—have been rocking your ass since the day you were born. So, pour some of that 40 out for the man who invented them: Link Wray. Dude provided inspiration to almost every guitar god who came after him and supplied the Pulp Fiction soundtrack with its baddest cuts, "Ace of Spades" and "Rumble." Long live the power chord, and long live Link Wray! (Well, you know, if he weren't dead.)

Polish Movie Posters

Finally, a reason to like Poland!

Your Tawny Kitaen poster sucks. She's older than the women on Desperate Housewives, and it's not even ironic to like Whitesnake anymore. These Polish translations of Hollywood movie posters (available at polishposter.com), however, put the potato in our pierogi. Cool posters for Terminator and Apocalypse Now look even more badass than ever. Plus, the Poles even managed to butch up Short Circuit 2. Matches are staged, fights spill into the stands and wrestlers like the Bolshoi Kid and Blizzard Yuki paint their faces and have signature moves like the nadare shiki, which has nothing to do with eating sushi off each other's naked bodies, but is just as unsanitary.

Tanja Reichert

Who knew Canada could get this hot?

The truth behind the movie Kiss Kiss, Bang Bang: "I play a B-movie actress who is trying to get ahead in Hollywood. The running theme throughout the movie is how fucked up L.A. girls are. I meet Robert Downey Jr.'s character at a party and I think he can help me out. It's really funny. There's a scene where my character gets a role in a horror movie. I'm having sex with a guy, and this monster comes in and rips my head off."

The trouble with threesomes: "It was so hot and humid when we shot the threesome scene in Club Dread that our nipples wouldn't stay hard. They wouldn't even respond to ice, so we took care of it ourselves."

Be aware when she's bare in the boudoir: "I like candles. Having the lights on is OK, but bright fluorescent lighting is not for me. It's not like I enjoy being in the dark, but I kind of like to see what's going on."

Fashion tip: "The thought of a guy wearing really tight briefs is kind of creepy."

POSER'S GUIDE TO...

SOUTHERN ROCK

There's a reason people who live below the Mason-Dixon line have more fun.

When those rednecks come down from the hills to drink your Jack Daniel's and use your daughter for target practice, there's only one sound that can tame the inbred beast: hick rock. Bring your overalls for these booze 'n' blues kings.

Go ahead, it's OK, get lost in those eyes. We won't hold it against you.

THE BANDS

BLACK OAK ARKANSAS

Lead singer James "Big Jim Dandy" Mangrum played a washboard onstage. Need we say more?

JOHNNY CASH

The South's godfather rocked more prisons and did more speed than all of these bands combined.

.38 SPECIAL

MUSIC

MEN NOT AT WORK

HANG THE DJ

Now that rap-rock is over, here are some employment ideas for the DJs who never really did anything in the first place.

DJ LETHAL

Limp Bizkit's DJ, formerly House of Pain's selector, has always been good at chopping things up. Resident sushi chef would finally be a position that really utilizes his, um, skills. We see a celebrity episode of Iron Chef in his future.

JOSEPH HAHN

Linkin Park's record-spinner and video director is credited with orchestrating the band's visuals while simultaneously hitting the decks. Wouldn't he make a lovely bar maid at Jamba Juice? He could mix us up a righteous Razzmatazz.

DJ HOMICIDE

The miserably named DJ of the Mark McGrath vehicle Sugar Ray would make a perfect courtroom bailiff, we think. Imagine Night Court's Bull, but black. Either that or a snowplow driver. Anything's got to beat being the DJ for Sugar Ray, no?

WHAT THE HELL?

"What do you mean they don't know Morrissey?"

PANCAKE MOUNTAIN

Rock's hippest bands come out in full force to play some of their underground tunes for...a kids' TV show?

New York's CBGB used to be America's hottest spot for live music. But the best place to find hipster-chic acts burning up the stage today is a Washington, D.C., cable-access show for toddlers called Pancake Mountain. Each episode features artists like George Clinton, Fugazi's Ian MacKaye and the Arcade Fire playing for a smattering of kiddies who scamper around during the raucous sets. There are even cartoons and band interviews. So throw on some Garanimals and get ready to fill your diaper!

Check out the archive of clips and interviews from Pancake Mountain at pancakemountain.com.

Stones Throw

Rap producers have loads of unreleased sketches on their hard drives, most of which probably sound like crap. Former A Tribe Called Quest producer J Dilla's efforts, however, deliver the tasty results heard here. And since almost every song is under two minutes, you'll never get bored. So get a hobby.

★★★★

IN MY MIND
Virgin

The Neptunes crooner finally succumbed to pressure and dropped a solo album. Splitting the disc between syrupy R&B and flashy hip-hop, Pharrell knocks out a winner. "Can I Have It Like That?" is classic woozy rap. Maybe next time his awkward rhyme style won't pale in comparison to coconspirator Jay-Z's.

★★★

THE DEREK TRUCKS BAND
SONGLINES
Columbia

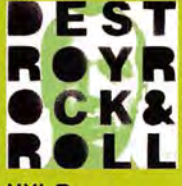
Monster axwielder Derek Trucks is the nephew of Allman Brothers guitarist Butch Trucks, so he knows a bit about the honky blues. Trucks comes into his own as a songwriter here, combining country rock, world music and blues. Kind of like John Mayer, except without all the sucking.

★★★★

THE SOUNDS
DYING TO SAY THIS TO YOU
New Line

There are no two ways about it: The Sounds' lead singer, Maja Ivarsson, is a sex bomb. She's blond, bouncy and rocks hard. And on her Swedish new wave group's second album, the band blows through 10 careening tracks without taking a breath. Look for "Queen of Apology"—it's a killer.

★★★



MYLO
DESTROY ROCK & ROLL
Breastfed/RCA

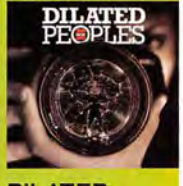
This dance doctor, a chart-topper in the U.K., is finally getting his U.S. due. Mylo combines traditional grooves with Miami Sound Machine–style heat, if you catch our meaning. (Our meaning has nothing to do with Gloria Estefan.) This debut does its damnedest to accomplish its title.

★★★

PREFUSE 73
SECURITY SCREENINGS
Warp

Following last year's dense Surrounded by Silence with another album so quickly is risky business for Scott Herren, aka Prefuse 73. But where Silence sounds distracted, this new effort really bangs. Utilizing slithery samples and drums, he's made a rap-centric release without all that pesky rapping.

★★★



DILATED PEOPLES
20/20
Capitol

While these longtime Los Angeles spit-kickers have old souls, they haven't lost the bounce in their music. MCs Rakka and Evidence are sensible men, but they're also weed-puffing party dudes. Usually 20/20 means good vision, but Dilated Peoples don't always see straight, which is a good thing.

SPORTS

BRO-FILE

JEREMY BLOOM

Mogul spanker and college-football standout Jeremy Bloom is poised to be the next dual-sport megastar.

As the Olympics wrap up in Italy, most of the athletes will be dragging their aching limbs to raging after-parties and rightfully letting loose like rock stars. Given the obscene popularity of skiing in Europe, one can only imagine how many bombshell groupies want a piece of Olympic wonderboy and part-time model Jeremy Bloom. So why will he be on a red-eye flight to Indianapolis? "That's easy," he explains. "To get there in time." Bloom, you see, is a former college-football star, and flying back early means having a shot at the NFL draft. Not even the party to end all parties can keep him overseas.

Wait—an Olympic skier in the National Football League? Believe it. As a wide receiver and punt-return specialist for the University of Colorado, Bloom was a highlight clip waiting to happen: He ran back a 75-yard kick on his first-ever play, snagged a school-record 94-yard touchdown pass and ranked fifth in the nation as a punt returner. The kid can ball. "I'm not worried about getting nailed," says Bloom, who is a slight 5-foot-11 and 185 pounds. "That's inevitable."

His opponents will have to catch him first—the multifaceted mountain man is just as explosive on the field as he is on the slopes. Bloom ran the 100-yard dash in 9.41 seconds during a made-for-TV SuperStars competition in 2003, bolting past Green Bay Packers speedster Ahman Green and into the NFL's consciousness. This winter, if all goes as planned, his transition from snow to turf will be seamless.

While we could discuss the eligibility battle Jeremy had with the NCAA and the fact that he was forced to shelve his cleats in order to train for the Olympics, we'd rather skip to the real question: Who gets more girls, skiers or football players? "Definitely football players," reports Bloom. "This is America, man! Football is king here." Sounds like this fella is making a wise career decision.

MOVIE OF THE MONTH

DAVE CHAPPELLE'S BLOCK PARTY

Dave Chappelle, the Fugees, Kanye West, Mos Def
Dir: Michel Gondry

WHAT IT IS Like a hip-hop Woodstock, this concert film captures the top-secret free show Chappelle staged in Brooklyn's Bed-Stuy neighborhood in September 2004. Directed by Michel Gondry (Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind, the White Stripes' "Fell in Love with a Girl" video) and boasting performances by Kanye West, the Roots, Common, Erykah Badu and more, the movie's twin highlights are a full-fledged Fugees reunion and a freestyle stand-up performance by Chappelle.

WHY WE'RE WORRIED Concert movies are a mixed bag—for every Gimme Shelter or The Last Waltz, there's a Truth or Dare or The Song Remains the Same, and either way, it's tough to avoid that "you had to be there" feeling. And any movie that hinges on mentally coherent work from Dave Chappelle, Lauryn Hill and the guy who directed Eternal Sunshine is already skating on thin ice.

WHY WE'RE PSYCHED It's Dave Chappelle doing stand-up, surrounded by the best acts in hip-hop—including the Fugees, a band we thought was about as likely to reunite as the Beatles—directed by a true genius. Do we have to draw you a picture here? The only way this would sound any cooler is if it featured a back-from-the-grave performance by Rick James.

Mos Def isn't just a rapper, a poet and an actor (see 16 Blocks, right), he's also Dave's straight man. Check out Block Party March 3!

BREAK IT DOWN

WHEN A STRANGER CALLS

Director Simon West raps on his remake.

"My version takes the first 20 minutes of the original—a babysitter is stuck in a house being terrorized by a guy on the phone—and expands it. It's taking a good idea that someone had and doing a new take on it. So, for example, since the film is set all in one place, instead of a suburban house with nothing special about it, I went for a modern house—a technological place with automatic light and sound systems, where everything is controlled by remote. If you're in there being terrorized, that technology can turn against you. It's realistic, and that's what makes it scary. There's nothing that couldn't happen to you."

"Actually, sir, I'm quite happy with my current plan."

NEW RELEASES

FIREWALL

HARRISON FORD, PAUL BETTANY, VIRGINIA MADSEN
Dir: Richard Loncraine

After his family is taken, Jack Stanfield (Ford) must deal with his own tenuous mental state as he is forced to break into the bank security system he created. Almost 30 years after Star Wars, we're just happy Harry can still walk.

★★

16 BLOCKS

BRUCE WILLIS, MOS DEF, DAVID MORSE
Dir: Richard Donner

An over-the-hill cop (Willis) is stuck with the job of escorting a blabbermouth witness (Def) to the courthouse. But it's an action flick, so the task isn't as simple as it seems: Deadly forces (aka the bad guys) do their darndest to ensure they don't make it.

March 3

★★★

LADY VENGEANCE

LEE YEONG-AE, CHOI MIN-SIK
Dir: Park Chanwook

This finale of a blood-soaked South Korean revenge trilogy (following Oldboy and Sympathy for Mr. Vengeance) is about a lady out to get even with the man who framed her for a child's murder. It might be the most violent flick you'll ever see.

DVD OF THE MONTH

DOG DAY AFTERNOON

Ah, the '70s—those heady days when maverick directors made their own rules, brilliant actors with last names like Pacino and Cazale lit up the screen and a Hollywood studio green-lighted a movie about a guy who becomes a media hero by holding up a bank to pay for his lover's sex-change operation. Nope, they don't make 'em like that anymore, which is why this two-disc special-edition DVD, released in time for the flick's 30th anniversary, is such a must. A commentary track from director Sidney Lumet and a whopping four-part documentary (featuring Pacino) provide a dog-day afternoon's worth of revelations. But the real attraction is the film itself, which captures '70s-era New York in all its wide-lapel, urban-decay nonglory. Buy it, and before long you'll be chanting "Attica! Attica!" so loud the NYPD will ticket your ass.

Shockingly, Dog Day Afternoon, available everywhere February 28, is based on a true story!

ESSENTIAL DVDs

GET ANIMATED!

Aaron McGruder, the creator of The Boondocks, draws together his all-time favorite cartoons on DVD.

Catch The Boondocks Sundays at 11 P.M. on Cartoon Network's Adult Swim!

SAMURAI CHAMPLOO

"This is another show that airs on Adult Swim and whose animation I'm a big fan of. If you've never seen it, it's well worth checking out."

SPEED RACER

"This has to be on the list! It was my favorite TV series as a kid."

PEANUTS CLASSIC HOLIDAY COLLECTION

"Definitely an essential, because these shows are my earliest memories of TV."

FLCL (FOOLY COOLY)

"Its Japanese-style animation served as an inspiration for the TV version of The Boondocks."

THE ANIMATRIX

"This is on the list because it's the only thing that continued the mythology of the first Matrix film in a respectable manner. These short prequels really worked."

REVIEWS

ULTIMATE AVENGERS: THE MOVIE

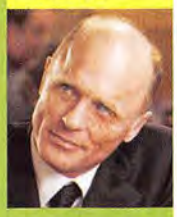
Based on The Ultimates comic series, this first-ever Marvel animated feature tells the story of a gang of independent superheroes—including Captain America, the Hulk, Iron Man and Wasp (we love her argyle sweaters)—who must learn to band together in order to save the world.

ACTION: THE COMPLETE SERIES

In this short-lived misanthropic gem of a TV show, Jay Mohr plays a Hollywood player so sleazy he makes Entourage's Ari Gold look like Gandhi. Be sure to watch the final ep, which features the creators' bitter response to the show's premature cancellation.

KISS KISS, BANG BANG

Dormant action guru Shane Black (aka the dude who wrote Lethal Weapon) helms this noir comedy about a small-time crook (Robert Downey Jr.) who stumbles into an audition for a role as a private eye and, in a meta-riffic twist, ends up becoming an actual PI who gets teamed with a gay dick played by non-gay dick Val Kilmer.



A HISTORY OF VIOLENCE

It may sound like a sociological dissertation, but this tale of a small-town family man (Viggo Mortensen) who foils an armed robbery and winds up exposing a possibly hidden past is a pulpy blend of violence and weirdness. Among the extras is a chill-inducing nightmare sequence that was deleted from the original film.

GAME OF THE MONTH

BLACK

PS2, Xbox Electronic Arts

When a high-level turncoat bolts from the American halls of power, Sergeant Jack Kellar must lead a special-ops team to track him down. In the stealth-free world of Black, doors aren't meant to be sneaked past: They're shot through, kicked down and splintered. This first-person shooter doesn't have to be clever, because its slick-as-oil artillery fetish will be just what your trigger finger asked for. Tote more than a dozen bullet-spitters and spray a stream of death through parts of the world where plumbing takes a backseat to antiballistic missiles. The environments aren't just eye candy, either. See that hotel sign hanging over the enemy squad? Sever it with a barrage of hot lead to take out the bad guys. The bone-rattling density of Black's combat makes the nine levels feel like tours of duty with the grizzliest mercenary squads the world has ever seen.

Fortunately, there is no obligatory waiting period before you're able to purchase Black when it hits stores February 28!

DIGITIZE THIS!

Designer and game freak Marc Ecko offers his picks for offbeat flicks that, as games, would rock your console.

DELIVERANCE (1972)

This action thriller was the Pulp Fiction of its time. Play as a young, wet and neoprene-vested Burt Reynolds. Aside from the whole sodomy thing, the rafting and crossbow hunting would surely make you squeal like a pig.

THE CANNONBALL RUN (1981)

Yes, more Burt…plus Dom DeLuise! This game would have tons of hot cars, as well as chases, derby crashes and pointless stupidity. Play as Sammy Davis Jr. or Jamie Farr. What's not to love?

CITY OF GOD (2002)

"Fight, and you'll never survive. Run, and you'll never escape." How's that for unbeatable? This Brazilian gangster tale would make San Andreas look like a milder version of a Berenstain Bears video game.

Knockouts

AS DECIDED BY YOU, JESSICA BURCIAGA HAS EMERGED THE VICTOR OF OUR EA SPORTS FIGHT NIGHT RING GIRL CONTEST. LET'S GET READY TO GET UNDRESSED!

WINNER BY KNOCKOUT!

BY FAYE RAUSCH PHOTOGRAPHS BY JIM MALUCCI

STUFF: Congratulations! As part of winning this contest, you were digitally rendered as a Fight Night ring girl. Do you even like boxing?

JESSICA: I do, actually. My dad is really big on fights, and my brothers love it. So it's neat that I'm going to be in a game now, and they can actually see it and play it. You can change what I wear and the color of my bikini—stuff like that.

How did you get into the contest in the first place?

My brother saw these random bikini pictures I took at the beach and told me about the contest. I was all, "They're all the way in New York. There are plenty of models there. They're not going to call me all the way in California." And then I was like, "What the heck? The worst they could do is not call me." Now I want to do more modeling. But it's hard for me to do real modeling—I'm only five-foot-two. But I love doing the bikini stuff and that type of thing.

We love you doing it, too. What was the process for turning you digital?

They scanned my entire body. Everything—even my belly button ring—will be in the video game. Then we did a photo shoot for the EA Games Web site and pictures for the video game at a legendary boxing ring in Chicago. They had me in boxing gloves, high heels and cute little boxing outfits.

Do you enjoy playing dress-up?

I'm very into dressing up. I'll wear stripper heels in bed with, like, sexy bras and panties. Usually my guy and I can have sex, like, four times in a night. We have vibrators, and I just bought that tasty stuff that you can put on your guy's privates. It's flavored like a Jolly Rancher. I'm really into pleasing. I get off more on seeing him pleasured by me. I'm more of a giver than a taker.

What kinds of guys make you most charitable?

I don't like insecure guys at all. The guy I'm dating now is a real bad boy, which I love. Like, six-foot-three, 250 pounds, tattoos from the neck down—that's what I like. But I like the bad-boy look; I don't want the personality.

You are a go-go dancer. Do you pick up guys on the job?

Go-go dancing is a great way to get a guy's attention, because you're in a club, you're up high and you have sexy clothes on. So, when you see a hot guy, you kind of try to dance a little harder.

Have you ever had any mishaps?

One time I slipped on a spilled drink and fell off my block.

Wow, you seem to give your all to everything you do.

Oh, gosh, I've done it all. My man is really aggressive in the bedroom, so I like to play like I'm an innocent little girl. But I like hair pulling and slapping and all that. If you're not aggressive with me in bed, I'm totally bored with you.

Good lord! Do you throw in anything else to spice it up?

We've been talking about having a threesome, and I'm cool with it, but there have to be rules. The thought of him sticking his thingie in another woman in front of me makes me want to throw up. But I'm into doing the girl-on-girl thing so he can watch. I've hooked up with chicks before, and I'd do it for him. It keeps a relationship exciting, bringing somebody else into the bedroom.

THIS MONTH'S TOPIC: WHAT IS ST. PATRICK'S DAY ALL ABOUT?

LIQUID WISDOM WITH DAVE ATTELL

FIRE YOUR LIFE COACH, KICK YOUR SENSEI'S ASS AND GET EMANCIPATED FROM YOUR PARENTS—IF YOU SEEK ANSWERS TO LIFE'S MANY MYSTERIES, HEAD TO YOUR LOCAL TAVERN. OUR DRINKING EDITOR IS FILLED WITH KNOWLEDGE AND IS JUST LOOKING FOR AN EXCUSE TO SPEW.

Hey, it's March, and that means St. Patrick's Day—which means green beer, parades and more green beer. St. Patrick's Day is like the Olympics for drunks. The day begins early with a parade. I don't know why we always have to have parades in the morning. I mean, some of us were out late celebrating St. Patrick's Eve and are still hungover. Anyway, it's a wild time and, as parades go, it's one of my favorites. It starts out pretty tame with a speech by some official, followed by marching bands, bagpipers and a couple of cute girls performing some Lord of the Dance–type number that is both beautiful and educational.

I remember a few years back, there was a big controversy as to whether homosexuals should be allowed to march in New York City's St. Patrick's Day parade. I think that's ridiculous, and it's not very fair to priests. Gays should definitely be allowed to march. Personally, I think the more the merrier. Besides, they could help tidy up after the parade is over.

Once the booze kicks in, the day quickly degenerates into one big drinking contest. Hot drunk girls are yelling "Kiss me, I'm Irish," guys wearing kilts are flashing for free pints, the bars are full and everybody is loaded. It is at this point that I usually run into my Irish friend Jameson and his buddy Jack O'Daniel's. Now things really get fun. A chorus of "Danny Boy" breaks out, then a couple of fights and, before you know it, it's time to puke. The whole day seems like Girls Gone Wild with freckles.

But with all of the drinking, debauchery and vomit wrestling the day brings, it's easy to forget that St. Patrick's Day is actually a religious holiday. It's a celebration of St. Patrick bringing Christianity to Ireland. As saints go, Patrick is probably one of the coolest. I know being a saint isn't about being "cool"—it has more to do with faith and selflessness and dying a horrible death—but he is definitely in my top five. St. Pat, St. Bernard, St. Joseph, St. Martin and St. Croix: Put them all together and you'll know why I'm not allowed on a cruise ship. But that's beside the point.

So who was St. Patrick anyway? Was he a real person? Did he travel the rolling hills of Ireland, killing snakes and taking names, with a four-leaf clover in one hand and a Guinness in the other? First off, there never were any snakes in Ireland. It's too wet and cold. The only wildlife you'll find there are sheep, horses and the occasional leprechaun, which can be pretty nasty. (Check out Leprechaun, parts one and two.)

I did a little research on the Internet to find out who St. Patrick really was. In between looking at porn sites, I learned that some 1,500 years ago, a young boy from Britain named Patricius was kidnapped by some bad dudes in Ireland and was held in virtual slavery until, one day, the voice of God told him to escape. As a thank you to God for the heavenly escape hatch, Patricius decided to dedicate the rest of his life to preaching the gospel. He returned to Ireland from Britain to minister to Christians and convert the Irish. So St. Pat was a real person: tough and spiritual at the same time—kind of like Colin Farrell and Liam Neeson combined.

It's stories like St. Patrick's that make Ireland such a beautiful and magical place, where anything is possible—except getting a tan. So come March 17, have a shot for St. Patrick, then another for me, then one more for St. Patrick, and keep it going till you can't feel your legs. Erin go bragh.

GETTING FIT WITH STACY KEIBLER

THIS MONTH'S EXERCISE: REVERSE ABDOMINAL CURLS

Sculpt that jiggling gut of yours into a washboard of steel. Get down on the floor with the flab-blasting Stuff fitness editor and WWE Diva!

SEE STACY IN HER HOMETOWN OF BALTIMORE IN NO WAY OUT LIVE ON PAY-PER-VIEW FEBRUARY 19!

GAME PLAN

"This is an extremely difficult move. I kept telling the trainer, 'Can we try a different exercise? This one is hard!' Try to do 25 reps. It's important to work different parts of your stomach: One day I'll work out my lower abdominals, the next day the obliques and another day the top. I love to feel my abs burn! And I really love looking at guys who have nice abs, too!"

1

"Here we go, guys. Grab a mat or find a cushiony carpet. Lie down on your back with your arms to your sides. Lift your legs and hold them perpendicular to your body. Keep your knees slightly bent; press your palms to the floor. Now get ready to feel it in your stomach!"

2

"Tighten your abs and curl your pelvis in toward your rib cage. Don't use your butt muscles. Really squeeze your abs, and press your heels to the ceiling. Like I said, it is hard, so don't do too many the first time you try it. It's a killer, but it's worth it."

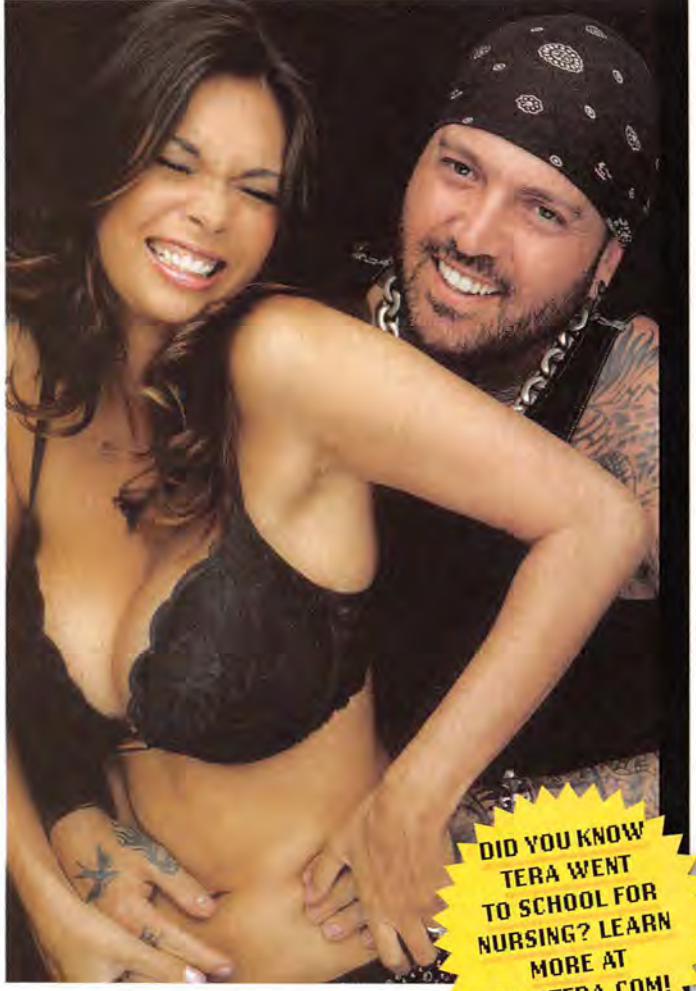
I MARRIED A PORN STAR, SUCKA!

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY CORRESPONDENT EVAN SEINFELD PULLS BACK THE CURTAINS ON THE LIFE YOU WISH YOU LIVED.



DID YOU KNOW TERA WENT TO SCHOOL FOR NURSING? LEARN MORE AT CLUBTERA.COM!

Most days, I wake up lying on my morning wood, dreaming about bacon, eggs and coffee. And minutes later, my dream breakfast comes through the door, served to me in bed by XXX-porn goddess Tera Patrick, who's usually wearing a sheer pink robe and bunny slippers. She's a great cook, she's drop-dead gorgeous, and she's my wife.

During the next hour, I eat, drink, shit, piss, fuck, chitchat and contemplate my existence. My band, Biohazard, has sold more than four million albums, I've starred on Oz, I run an adult talent agency and a production company, and I'm the exclusive manager of the hottest porn star in the business. I guess this makes me some kind of Renaissance man of the millennium. But while I definitely wouldn't trade my life for anything, I'm here to share with you some of the hidden twists and turns of living a life that most men would kill to have.

Food has become an issue for us. I'm so consumed by producing, bodyguarding and doing whatever it is that Tera needs at any given moment that I barely make it to the gym and rarely take the time to eat properly. And while feeding each other cannolis in bed is cute and all, the end result is that I've gained twenty-something pounds as a thirtysomething. My wife's superior Asian genetics allow her the luxury of McDonald's and Godiva after her 4:20 munchies without gaining an ounce. So she wants me to lose weight, and it's a sore spot. To be naked is one thing. To be naked on film forever—overweight and humping—is something else altogether.

Both will make you chubby.

Most people would think that a couple that screws other people in front of cameras might experience more weighty issues than, well, weight, but our relationship is rock solid. It might seem weird to some that Tera and I can spend the afternoon doing some girl for three hours, discussing cunnilingus techniques and comparing notes on third-party feminine hygiene (occasionally porn actresses are unaware of their less-than-fresh essence), then go out for a superromantic one-on-one candlelit dinner, followed by a long chopper ride up the coast. But we both understand that what we do on the set has nothing to do with how much we love each other.

The most common question we're asked is whether we get jealous. What is funny about our dynamic is that, in a movie, I can get a blow job from four girls at once for a full hour with little or no reaction from my wife. But we could be out at a party, and a kiss on the cheek from a groupie or a fan might rub her the wrong way. And when it comes to Tera performing with other men on camera, it is strictly business for us. I pick the guys; I direct the scenes. (I do get a little tired of hearing her giggle with her girlfriends about how hot David Beckham is—shit, if I got paid to play soccer, I'd be in good shape, too.) But the truth is, a good threesome will make you truly appreciate your partner. I'm married; I'm not castrated. If a hot chick walks by, I don't have to pretend I'm not checking her out. And I find great inner peace in being married to a woman who doesn't ask me to be someone I'm not.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not here to force my views on anyone. I'm just telling you how it can be. People look down their noses at us (There go the porn people!) all the time. I have to wonder, Do they hate or fear what I represent? Are they jealous of the flashy cars and the hot chicks in and out of the house? Probably, but what they're really jealous of is my happiness. I represent a freedom they will never know. I am Captain America, damn it!

So while I can't say life married to one of the world's hottest porn stars is without its insecurities, I can say it definitely doesn't suck. Now, if I can just get my ass to the gym.

expect everything

Looking more like a Maybach than a Chrysler, the Royale—customized by Santini Paint USA—is the Jersey Turnpike dream car. Five Axis xA Speedster / $250,000
For this one-off custom Scion job, the psychos at Five Axis started with a base model xA (a bargain at $13,270) and then went wild on the parts and labor, adding three Xbox 360s, 19-inch monitors and a 40-inch projection screen—under the hood! The tuners also took out the roof and windows, so rain is Kryptonite to this pricey supercar.

Ford GTX1 Roadster / $149,995
The Ford GT already looks like an Italian sports car, and the alterations on this GTX1 model propel it into Hot Wheels territory. The engineering brainiacs at the blue oval installed a removable four-panel roof (for an extra $38,000), meaning you can switch between a coupe, a T-top or a full-on ragtop. Now that's a convertible.

DANCER TURNED WRESTLER TURNED DANCER STACY KEIBLER IS JUST AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL—WHO HAPPENS TO ENJOY BEATING THE CRAP OUT OF OTHER WOMEN.

BY ANNA DAVID
PHOTOGRAPHS BY JIM MALUCCI

STACY KEIBLER

Stacy Keibler may have legs that put gazelles' to shame and a rear end that inspires fellow wrestlers to spout poetry (she says Bubba Ray Dudley told her it "looks like a heart"), but she's still not willing to drop her top for Joe Public. Having nixed three generous offers to pose nude, the 26-year-old WWE Diva may get down and dirty in the wrestling ring, but she still likes "to leave a little to the imagination." But if you've been imagining what it would be like to see Stacy ballroom dance, then you're in luck. She's currently stealing the show on ABC's hit Dancing with the Stars, dropping the figurative smackdown on fellow celebs like Master P, Tia Carrere and Jerry Rice. And guess what? Stacy is gorgeous even when she's not choking someone.

STUFF: What has it been like preparing to compete on Dancing with the Stars?

STACY: We've been practicing four hours a day, plus we've been having interviews and photo shoots. My whole life right now is becoming a professional ballroom dancer.

Is that easy for you, since you've danced since you were three?

It's taken me so long to get the right steps, because I have to break some habits of ballet to do this. I never danced with a partner, and that's incredibly difficult. I just want to be able to do the steps on my own and not deal with someone else tripping up. Ballroom dance is completely different.

How did you wind up on the show, anyway?

My mom watched the first season and said, "You should see if they're doing a second season, because it would be great to watch you on it." So I called my publicist. It was months of meetings and holding our breath, and then they just called and said, "So, how would you like to be on the show?"

I'm sure your world-famous legs didn't hurt your chances. What's the craziest line you've ever gotten about your legs?

One time, a guy came up to me and said, "If you ever need help shaving your legs, call me," and he gave me his number. I laughed at the effort. Regardless of what he said, it's still flattering when someone comes up to you and notices something.

When did you first realize you had a body that would inspire men to humiliate themselves like that?

I wasn't really aware of it until I got into the wrestling business. I'd start doing interviews, and people were like, "You have great legs." And I was like, "I do? Well, that's nice. Thanks." When I was younger, I was always tall, but I wasn't necessarily the tallest one in my class.

Are you one of those girls that's going to say you had braces and were dorky and the boys never liked you in high school?

Well, I had braces. And in my group of girlfriends there was definitely one girl that everyone loved and wanted to date, and it wasn't me.

So you were nerdy?

[Laughs] I wouldn't say nerdy so much as goofy. People's perception of me when they look at me is definitely not who I really am. I enjoy the simple things. I love to laugh. I like to make fun of myself.

"ONE TIME, A GUY CAME UP TO ME AND SAID, 'IF YOU EVER NEED HELP SHAVING YOUR LEGS, CALL ME,' AND HE GAVE ME HIS NUMBER."

You're all natural in a business not known for that. Do you have any plans to go under the knife?
I'm very happy with how God made me. And I think there's so much more to people than just the physical body. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder. It doesn't always have to be physical.

So if looks don't matter, what does?
I think that friendship is so important. Everybody's going to mess up, but if you're friends, that goes a long way. So many couples act like different people when they're apart. I don't understand it.

You sound pretty sensitive for someone who gets bashed around in a wrestling ring.
I've been thrown through tables, thrown into the ring, thrown to the side—just thrown here and there. I've been hit with chairs. I've broken my nose twice and cracked my ribs. I don't wrestle full-time, so when I do, my body's not used to it, and I feel like I got into a car wreck. Two days later, I can't even get out of bed.

Speaking of bed, what does it take to keep you happy there?
I like a guy that snuggles. Every girl might not like that, but it makes me feel safe.

What's the sexiest thing a guy has ever said to you?
I just think it's really sexy when a guy says, "You're beautiful," not "You're hot." Girls love that so much. I don't know why.

As a little girl, did you ever imagine yourself as a major player in the wrestling world?
Never. I went to an all-girls Catholic high school. I never thought I would be in this business. I don't watch it, and I was never the person who said, "I want to be a wrestler."

What do you like about it?
It's fun for me to do the things that I do, because it's all a character. I'm not at home washing dishes in my bikini and doing that kind of stuff.

How much of the job is acting?
I'm more of an actress and a personality than a wrestler, so I prefer to be a bad girl in the storyline because I'm not a bad girl in real life. I'm not snotty, so to act like that to the fans, that's being a character—which is what I love to do.

Not many women enjoy being hated.
It's so much fun. I mean, men like to see women wrestle, so it's so hard to get the crowd to boo you. Which means that if you do, you're doing a damn good job.

LEGEND

Who else but Richard Pryor could make an audience laugh with a bit about his third-degree-burned body? Who else would craft a routine around his conversation with a crack pipe? The late comic's genius came from his willingness to mine the ugly, sordid details of his life—growing up in a whorehouse, battling drug addiction—for comedy. Hollywood was so afraid of him that the suits refused to make Blazing Saddles, a movie he cowrote, with him in the starring role. As documented in numerous live CDs and concert films, Pryor set the standard for the next generation of comics, including Eddie Murphy and Chris Rock. And until he became too weak to perform, he even found material in multiple sclerosis—the disease that led to the heart attack that did him in—as he riffed on being impotent and pissing himself. In 2004, while convalescing in his Encino Hills, California, home, Pryor offered Stuff this final glimpse inside his comic mind.

STUFF: Your influence on comedy is undeniable. Can you name the one comedian that you feel has taken the most from your style?
PRYOR: Where would I begin? The list is endless. I would say most of the comics today.
What do you regret most about living the fast life in your youth?
I don't have a lot of regrets, but I did hurt people. I am sorry for that.
Can you recall the proudest moment in your career?
There are many. I think I am most proud of Live! In Concert. I still watch it my own self and love it. I also really like the NBC shows. We did great work on that show.
Your feuds with the network censors for The Richard Pryor Show were legendary. What's the most ridiculous one you ever had?
Ask [executive producer] Burt Sugarman. They were bastards who thought they knew what was funny.
You mentioned many of your problems in your biography, Pryor Convictions. There was your insecurity, addiction, depression—have you overcome those demons?
I have made peace with my demons.
Your comedy was base but also sophisticated. Today it seems that many black comics have the base part down but not the intelligent part. What do you think about the state of black comedy right now?
Where is the substance? They got the punctuation right, but where are the meat and potatoes?
You were reluctant to use the word nigger in your comedy after your return from Kenya in 1979. What is it like to see the hip-hop community and comedians like Dave Chappelle embrace it so much?
The culture has changed. Hell, I might be using it again. It's a strong word, though. I don't want no white person calling me a nigger.
You've been through a lot in life, yet you've never complained. What do you think of artists, specifically rappers, who use their rocky pasts as selling points?
Shit, I guess they use what they can. I'm not going to judge 'em.
Do you feel that black entertainers have a social responsibility that others don't?
All human beings have responsibility. I can only speak for me. I did what I did 'cause it came from my heart.
Which comics do you idolize?
I love Dave Chappelle and Chris Rock, and I wish Chris Tucker would come back, but I don't idolize anybody.
Which comedians had the most profound effect on your work?
Lenny Bruce, Moms Mabley, Redd Foxx, and I loved Lord Buckley.
When you first got a taste of real money, what was the most ridiculous purchase you ever made?
I can tell you the best—some fine pussy.
Does mortality frighten you, or is it something you've accepted?
Life is good, and I don't want to be frightened. I just take it as it comes. I want to enjoy every minute.
What's the most effective way of dealing with your illness? What helps you get through the day?
I watch lots of comedy and go to the movies. And my dogs help. I have some fine Spanish bitches helping me through, and my wife Jenny is with me, God bless her. I hate this disease, but as Jenny says, maybe it's keeping me alive.
What was your proudest moment as a comedian?
Getting onstage every time was always the proudest moment of my career. Every time pretty much felt like the first. I lost it for a minute there, but I got it back. I'm proud of being a comic—and all the women want you. [Laughs]
Why does comedy attract the most complicated and conflicted people?
I don't know. Maybe we need that love. Making people laugh is a gift. The sound is gold. Pain into comedy is what it's about, and pain makes fucked-up people.
Tell us the craziest thing that ever happened to you on a movie set.
Stir Crazy—the Feds told me to stop buying dope in Tucson or they'd have to bust me. [Laughs]
What was your most positive film experience?
I loved doing Blue Collar and Lady Sings the Blues.
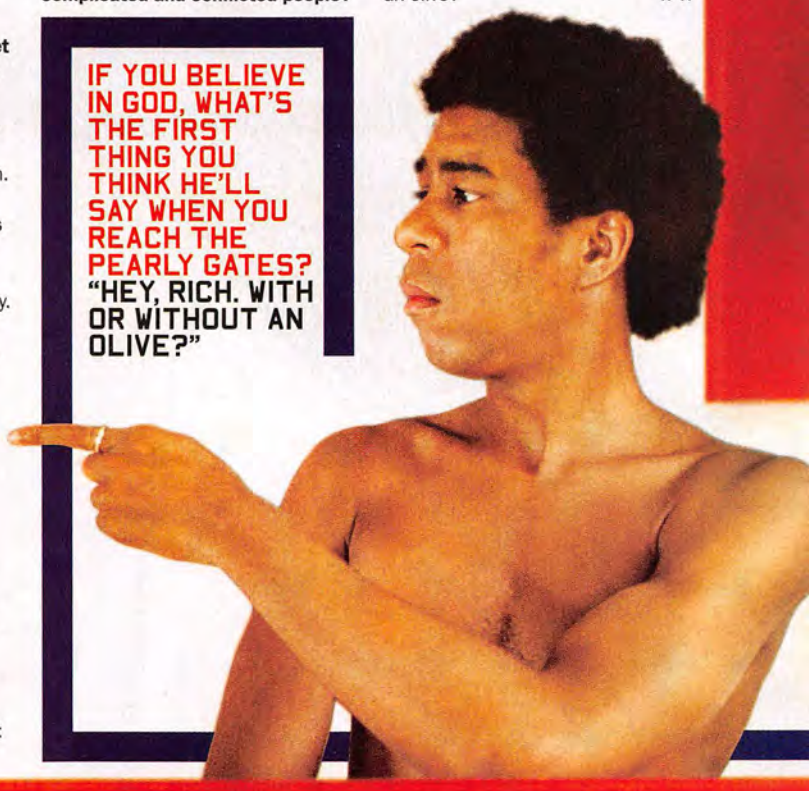
What's the happiest you've ever been?
Being onstage.
What outrages you?
Bush. Fuck Bush.
If you believe in God, what's the first thing you think he'll say when you reach the pearly gates?
"Hey, Rich. With or without an olive?"

IF YOU BELIEVE IN GOD, WHAT'S THE FIRST THING YOU THINK HE'LL SAY WHEN YOU REACH THE PEARLY GATES? "HEY, RICH. WITH OR WITHOUT AN OLIVE?"



DUCATI

EVERY DAY ON THE STREETS OF LOS ANGELES, PAPARAZZI CHASE AFTER TODAY'S BIGGEST STARS FOR THEIR PICTURES. MEET THE MAN EVERYBODY LOVES TO HATE.

HUNTING LINDSAY LOHAN!

Peering over a privacy gate that rings the garden of Hollywood's storied Chateau Marmont, Giles Harrison cracks a wicked smile. The six-foot-eight, 300-pound paparazzo has a lens trained on one of the hottest teen actresses on the planet as she enjoys some afternoon drinks with friends. "We've got Lindsay Lohan drinking a Corona," he whispers as he clicks away. "That's underage drinking. That's a good one." While the 19-year-old Lohan's frequent visits to chic nightclubs litter the gossip columns, no one has snapped the money shot of her actually imbibing—until now.

It's the catch of the day for the British-born Harrison, 37, a battle-hardened soldier in the SUV army of paparazzi who trawl Los Angeles for celebrities. In 1998, he spent 39 days in jail after he and another photographer were accused of running Arnold Schwarzenegger's Mercedes, which carried his son and pregnant wife, off the road and then jumping out to take pictures. The incident, on the heels of the death of Princess Diana, prompted California to pass its first antipaparazzi law.

While he hated doing time, Harrison hasn't managed to stay out of trouble. In 2002, he served 17 days for breaking the nose of a rival shooter from Fame Pictures who Harrison claims uttered the n-word while they were jockeying for a photo. And earlier this year, Harrison was hit with felony assault charges after a brawl with rival snapper Tomas Maidana. A videotape of the incident reportedly shows the men trading slurs: After Harrison yells, "Take the boat back to Cuba!" Maidana spews a racial epithet. Harrison responds by punching him in the head.

"I don't regret doing it for one second," Harrison says. "I believe in a live-and-let-live policy: You leave me alone, I leave you alone. They don't call me names, I don't get in fights with them."

TURF WAR

The violent clashes between rival paparazzi on the streets of L.A. have more in common with the turf battles in The Warriors than the glamour in Fellini's La Dolce Vita. Besides Harrison, who heads his own company, there's Arnold Cousart's

Giles Harrison in his battle gear.

BY CHRIS WILSON PHOTOGRAPHS BY TOM CORBETT

JFX Direct, named after the gang-bangers he grew up with; X17, Francois Navarre's army of freelancers who reportedly run in wolf pack–like SUV caravans; and the ultra-aggressive shooters of Boris Nizon's aforementioned Fame Pictures, just to name a few.

The paparazzi explosion can be traced directly to the celebrity-magazine boom. While there was a time when only People and supermarket tabloids like The National Enquirer, Star and Globe shelled out cash for shots of celebs, now weeklies like Us, In Touch, Life & Style, Celebrity Living and the U.S. version of OK! are offering big bucks for pictures of Brangelina, TomKat, Britney and Jessica to fill their pages.

The upshot for skilled shutterbugs is that "papping" celebrities can be very lucrative. According to a pretrial report in his latest assault case, Harrison earns $30,000 to $40,000 a month. He declined to confirm that figure, saying only, "Put it this way: I do very well."

But all that money comes with its share of unwanted attention. The Los Angeles District Attorney's office has launched a conspiracy probe into the photo agencies that employ aggressive paparazzi. Fame Pictures shooter Galo Ramirez was arrested last May after Lohan accused him of purposefully ramming her Mercedes with his van. The agency's lawyer has insisted the crash was an accident, but the high-profile collision spurred Governor Schwarzenegger to sign a bill into law making it easier for celebrities to collect damages from reckless photographers and the agencies that hire them.

Ken Sunshine, a publicist who represents Leonardo DiCaprio, Justin Timberlake and Ben Affleck, says the government crackdown is long overdue. "I don't mind if they take a picture of my clients looking schlumpy at Starbucks," he says. "But the wild car chases, the instigating fights with celebrities, frightening their children—that, to me, is way over the line. What if an innocent bystander was killed? There's a new breed of stalkerazzi out in L.A. It's worse than ever."

ON THE PROWL

Rolling down Sunset Boulevard in his black Chevy Tahoe, Harrison displays an uncanny eye for spotting his prey. He points to a small crowd across from the Beverly Hills Hotel. "That's David Arquette," he says, and he spins the truck in an effortless U-turn. He grabs his Nikon D1X with the 400 mm lens from the backseat and squeezes off 13 frames of Courtney Cox's husband, who is in the middle of a shoot. Arquette sees the camera, covers his face and flips us the bird.

Just then, Harrison's cell phone starts chirping the James Bond theme music. It's his staff photographer, David, who has been staking out Brad Pitt's $8 million Malibu mansion. It's chase time: Pitt, his girlfriend, Angelina Jolie, and her adopted children, Maddox and Zahara, are on the move.

Harrison catches up to a six-SUV convoy following the Brangelina Escalade on Highway 101 in Woodland Hills. An unknown shooter in a gray Ford Expedition is tailing close behind them, weaving wildly in and out of traffic to stay at the head of the pack. "Who's the idiot in the gray car?" Harrison barks into his cell. We follow the motorcade to Van Nuys Airport, where a private plane is being prepped on the runway.

The shooters jump out of their SUVs in the airport parking lot, and several climb on their roofs and start blasting away as the Escalade pulls up to the plane. Jolie gets out carrying Zahara, followed by Pitt, who had been crouching in the passenger seat with a towel over his head.

Pitt, who's wearing sunglasses and a skullcap, boards the plane with little Maddox in his arms. Click, click, click. The photo orgy abruptly ends when airport security cars pour into the parking lot. Everyone scrambles to his truck and drives off.

Harrison rendezvouses with David on a side street near the airport. They examine Harrison's pictures of Pitt carrying his soon-to-be-adopted son onto the plane. "Fucking nailed it," David grins. "Of course I did," Harrison says. "A little bit fuzzy, but they'll do." At a nearby Starbucks, Harrison loads the digital images onto his PowerBook G4 and sends them to photo agencies that distribute his shots. People.com was eventually the winning bidder. Harrison declined to say how much he was paid, but a photo editor at a celebrity weekly tells Stuff that it probably sold in the area of $15,000, depending how many other paparazzi got clear shots that day.

THE COMPETITION

Harrison stops at a Chevron station in Brentwood. "Is that Kristin Davis?" he asks. "Her ass has gotten fucking huge!" As the sweatpants-clad Sex and the City star fuels up, Harrison aims his camera. Click, click, click. She puts her hand over her face, embarrassed, and smiles. Harrison lets out a laugh and takes off. "That'll pay a bill," he says. "It's exclusive." (Stuff's source puts the tab at around $1,000.)

Harrison is on Sunset again, headed back to Beverly Hills. "There goes Lara Flynn Boyle," Harrison mutters. "She's not worth making an illegal U-turn for."

His all-seeing eye is just as proficient at spotting other paparazzi. When we pass a vintage pickup truck, Harrison says it belongs to ↘

"THEY DON'T KNOW HOW TO BE DISCREET. RAY CHARLES COULD SPOT THEM."

Todd K. Wallace, the photographer who was charged with battery and child endangerment last October for allegedly striking one of Reese Witherspoon's kids with his camera. A female staffer at the posh Lisa Kline boutique in Beverly Hills filed a restraining order against Wallace after he allegedly yelled vulgar threats at her when she told him to stop bothering The OC's Mischa Barton.

"The stuff I've been in trouble for is petty compared to that stupid shit," Harrison says of Wallace. "Who the fuck pushes children out of the way? That's just ridiculous."

Harrison pulls up in front of Mr. Chow, where a tipster dishes that Desperate Housewives vixen Nicollette Sheridan is lunching inside. A ragtag crowd of amateur snappers waits across the street.

"They have no training in this industry," Harrison sniffs. "They don't know how to be discreet. Ray Charles could spot them." As if on cue, they all start shooting movie producer Brian Grazer as he leaves. "Look at them," Harrison continues, his indignation rising. "They look homeless. Would you want them standing outside your restaurant?"

But just as the paparazzi pecking order entitles a successful pro like Harrison to trash his competitors, the celebrities that are his quarry are happy to heap abuse on him. He says Tommy Lee smashed his windshield with a rock after a car chase and that Jason Statham—the tough-guy star of The Transporter—once challenged him to a fight in an alley. More common, Harrison's prey simply tell him to get a life.

"It bums me out if they get personal," he says. "When people say I need to get a life—I have a life, and I enjoy it. This is not my life; this is what I do for a living. It's not the be all, end all of my existence."

"TWO SIDES TO EVERY STORY"

Sometimes paparazzi face more than just verbal scorn. This summer in Malibu, outside the house where Britney Spears was having her baby shower, an X17 photographer was shot with a BB gun. Barry Levine, an executive editor at The National Enquirer, says such reprisals are nothing new. He alleges that while he was a reporter at the Star in 1989, he and photographer Russell Turiak were blasted with a shotgun as their helicopter hovered over Don Johnson's wedding to Melanie Griffith in Aspen.

"It almost caused us to crash and kill everyone at the wedding," Levine says. "We had to be treated at the scene for wounds. The fact is, whatever is happening on the streets of Hollywood, there are two sides to every story."

Harrison does sometimes feel guilty about his chosen trade. About 10 years ago, when he was just starting out in the business, he spotted Muhammad Ali at LAX. "He was sitting on his briefcase, just shaking really bad," Harrison recalls. "I felt terrible about it. I couldn't do it."

Harrison says Witherspoon has asked him not to photograph her kids. "I was completely respectful of that," he says. "I realize that as a six-foot-eight black guy following women around, I can freak them out. If they ask me not to take a picture, I'll usually comply. I am very polite and respectful."

Good manners aside, it's all about selling pictures in the end. A few days after riding with Harrison, we call him to see how much his shot of Lohan drinking beer fetched.

"Nobody really wanted it," he said. "I guess nobody wanted to deal with her lawyer sending a letter or her going on TV and saying her privacy was invaded. It still might sell, but right now it's dead. I don't really care. If one picture doesn't sell, the next one will."

KNOW YOUR PIT CREW

A RACE CAN BE WON OR LOST OVER THE COURSE OF 13 SECONDS IN THE PIT. BUT WHAT THE HELL ARE ALL THOSE GUYS ACTUALLY DOING? GLAD YOU ASKED!

01 SUPPORT CREW

They assist the guys on the money side of the wall by handing them fuel, rolling them tires and passing them wrenches and air hoses. Unless there's an emergency, they can never enter the pit lane.

02 NASCAR OFFICIAL

Just don't call him the Fun Police. He hates that.

03 FRONT-TIRE CHANGER

Using a pneumatic gun to loosen and tighten the lug nuts, this guy changes the front tire.

04 FRONT-TIRE CARRIER

Carries front tire.

05 EXTRA MAN

If a NASCAR official gives the OK, an eighth man is allowed over the wall to assist the driver or, if he's lucky, clean the windshield.

06

02 DARRELL WALTRIP

DAYTONA INTERNATIONAL SPEEDWAY, PEPSI 400
JULY 6, 1991
"The car went sideways and airborne, rolling down the back straightaway at about 160 mph. It was a wild wreck. You can see the springs and fuel coming out. He was knocked out with his arm sticking outside the car."

03 PHIL PARSONS

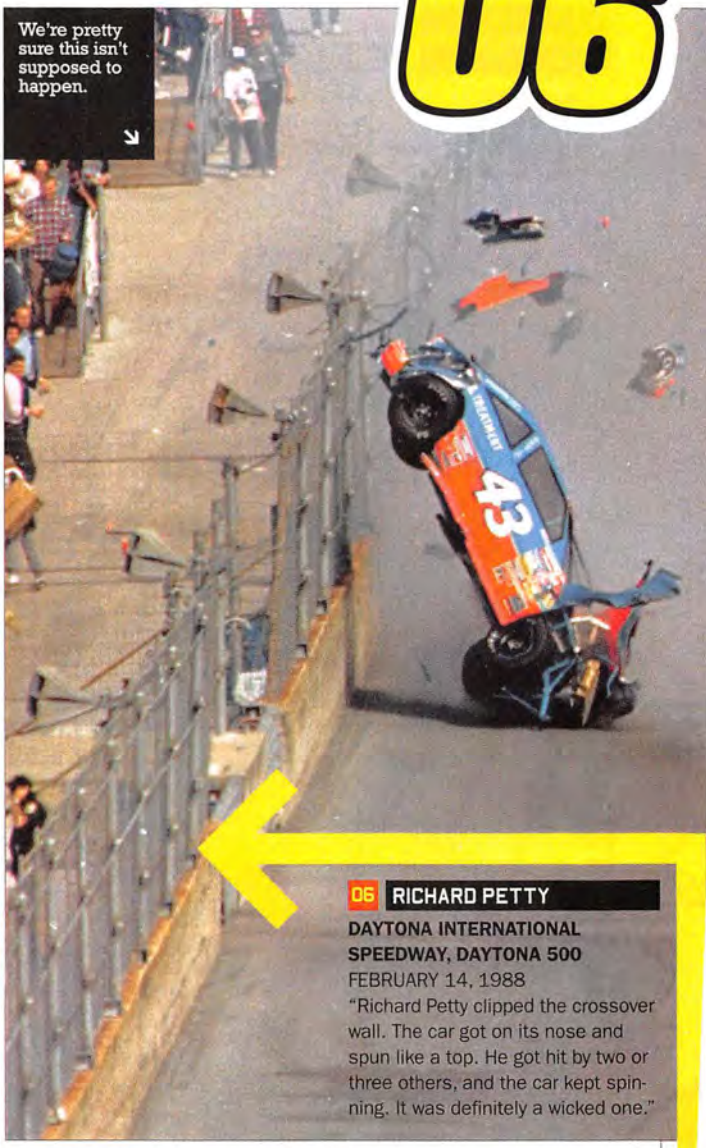
TALLADEGA SUPERSPEEDWAY, WINSTON 500 MAY 1, 1983
"Phil Parsons and Darrell Waltrip triggered a big multicar wreck. Phil Parsons' car was totally destroyed and wound up in the International Motorsports Hall of Fame. It was nothing but a pile of rubble."

04 LEE PETTY

DAYTONA INTERNATIONAL SPEEDWAY, DAYTONA 500 QUALIFYING RACE NO. 2
FEBRUARY 24, 1961
"Petty and Johnny Beauchamp went through the guardrail. Back then, the cars were so heavy—over 4,000 pounds. Petty just about cut his whole front end off."

05 JIMMY HORTON

TALLADEGA SUPERSPEEDWAY, DIEHARD 500 JULY 25, 1993
"It was the big one. He actually went out of the stadium. Jimmy's car literally climbed on top of another car and he catapulted over it. He's one of the very few drivers I know who's ever gone out of a racetrack. He wound up on the access road."



We're pretty sure this isn't supposed to happen.

06 RICHARD PETTY

DAYTONA INTERNATIONAL SPEEDWAY, DAYTONA 500
FEBRUARY 14, 1988
"Richard Petty clipped the crossover wall. The car got on its nose and spun like a top. He got hit by two or three others, and the car kept spinning. It was definitely a wicked one."

07 RICKY CRAVEN

TALLADEGA SUPERSPEEDWAY, WINSTON SELECT 500
APRIL 28, 1996
"Ricky got the car up in the catch fence, ripped the front engine and basically reduced it to cockpit-area-only. It was a really violent crash that put Ricky in a compromised mental state for several races to come."

08 DAVEY ALLISON

POCONO INTERNATIONAL RACEWAY, MILLER GENUINE DRAFT 500 JULY 19, 1992
"Davey Allison's car got in the grass, hit the inside wall, catapulted on top of the wall and flipped down the inside wall several times. Nothing career-ending, but he got his bell rung pretty good."

09 DALE EARNHARDT

POCONO INTERNATIONAL RACEWAY, MOUNTAIN DEW 500
JULY 25, 1982
"Earnhardt and Tim Richmond went into the outside wall and got up on top of each other. Earnhardt wound up upside down. You don't ever want to see a car upside down. They'll collapse, and it'll get ugly."

10 25-CAR BIG ONE

TALLADEGA SUPERSPEEDWAY, AARON'S 499 MAY 1, 2005
"That's what happens when guys bump-draft when they don't need to. Jimmie Johnson was bumping with Earnhardt Jr. and Earnhardt, in turn, hit Mike Wallace. They started stacking each other up—25 guys getting torn up."

ANTE UP

WANT TO SPONSOR YOUR OWN RACE CAR FOR A YEAR? ALL IT TAKES IS $30 MILLION AND A DREAM.

+ $12 MILLION–$20 MILLION

Don't worry, this sum should get you more than just the main hood logo. As primary sponsor, you should also get the upper-rear quarter panel and maybe even the back deck lid. (Note: Sometimes cars rent out single-race paint schemes wherein a nonprimary sponsor becomes the primary for that race. This normally costs $350,000, but would fetch no less than $500,000 for a big race, such as the Daytona 500.)

+ $350,000

That's the cost if one of these four spots is available individually, but they're usually part of a larger package.

+ $350,000–$500,000

This is sometimes sold in a package with the back panel of the car.

+ $200,000

Be warned: Some teams might try to get as much as $300,000 or $350,000.

+ $1 MILLION

This is the standard price, unless you're a bigger name, like Dale Earnhardt Jr. Then the price goes up to several million.

KEEP IN MIND:

- The number on the side and top of the car must be clear of ads.
- Buying a spot on the side of the car means you also get the same spot on the other side. Usually, it will be the same graphic, but a company with multiple brands can use a different one, if desired.
- Some of these costs—particularly the primary and associate sponsorships—include placements on the driver's fire suit, as well as perks like drivers appearing in their commercials.

+ $3 MILLION–$5 MILLION

This is also often a package deal that includes a second logo on the lower-rear quarter panel.

+ $1 MILLION–$3 MILLION

These are official NASCAR sponsors. Teams choose the ones that do not compete with their own sponsors.

+ $3 MILLION–$5 MILLION

This price applies only if this space is sold separately and not as part of the primary sponsorship deal.

+ $300,000–$500,000

Only if this space is sold separately from others.

+ $25,000–$200,000

These are often suppliers of things the teams use (like paint), so they often pay this off in materials.

+ $400,000–$600,000

Only if this space is sold separately from others.

A (FAST) TRIP DOWN MEMORY LANE

NASCAR HAS ITS ROOTS IN PROHIBITION. WHY ARE WE TELLING YOU THIS? AS AN EXCUSE TO SHOW COOL, OLD PICTURES, OF COURSE!

1950 As you can see, racing's beginnings were pretty damn humble.

1956 In the '50s, legends like Lee Petty made history in (slightly) sleeker rides.

1966 Racers like Lee Petty's son, Richard, enjoyed improved technology.

1977 In the '70s, cars finally started to resemble the rides you know and love.

1983 It's not all that long ago, but Bobby Allison's car looks antiquated today.

10 CATCH-CAN MAN

This dude holds a can to collect overflow from the refueling process. He also raises his hand when the refueling is finished to let the rest of the crew know that the car can get back onto the track.

09 GAS MAN

Another self-explanatory one; he empties two 11-gallon cans into the car's fuel cell. (Each can weighs 81 pounds.)

08 REAR-TIRE CARRIER

Exactly what it sounds like. This guy assists the rear-tire changer by bringing a new right- or left-side tire to him. If necessary, he might also adjust the track bar, which changes the car's handling.

06 JACK MAN

His job is to operate the 20-pound hydraulic jack that raises the car for tire changes. After new tires are put on the right side, he does the same thing on the left.

07 REAR-TIRE CHANGER

He does the exact same thing as the front-tire changer but, you know, in the rear.

THE BEST FEUDS OF '05

THERE WAS A FISTFIGHT DURING THE FIRST EVER NATIONALLY TELEVISED NASCAR RACE. SOME THINGS NEVER CHANGE.

ROBBY GORDON vs. MICHAEL WALTRIP

Waltrip totaled Gordon's car at Loudon, so Anger Boy tried to rear-end Waltrip's car on another lap. When that didn't work, he ran out onto the track (into oncoming traffic) and tried to hurl his helmet through Waltrip's window. This from a guy who taunted Carl Edwards' crew chief so badly before a race in Mexico City that the guy allegedly kneed Gordon in the groin.

ROBBY GORDON vs. STERLING MARLIN

Just eight days before Gordon became a SportsCenter star with his helmet tossing (above), he had a run-in in another race. But Marlin knew what to do when Gordon helped him into the wall in Richmond: Come lap 313, he just turned right—dead-on into Gordon's side. Once back on track, Gordon immediately torpedoed Marlin.

TONY STEWART vs. JIMMIE JOHNSON

Johnson's crew chief razzed Stewart's crew before a race in Martinsville, saying that Johnson's car was better. But the real fireworks came in Phoenix in late April, when Johnson wrecked Stewart on lap 207. Johnson insists Stewart had flipped him the bird at 120 mph a lap earlier when they were side by side.

DALE EARNHARDT JR. vs. TONY EURY SR.

Has your uncle ever vented to the press about his disappointment with your racing? Dale's has. DEI even moved Uncle Tony off his nephew's car so their on-track bickering wouldn't jeopardize their family ties. Apparently, absence makes the heart grow colder.

JEFF GORDON vs. TONY STEWART

Here's an example of their charming verbal sparring. Gordon: "I'll slam you into the wall the first chance I get." Stewart: "That is fine. We can get into a car-crashing war. It does not matter to me."

Back in the day, fights were nasty. And colorless.

DRIVERS POLL

WE GRILL SIX OF NASCAR'S YOUNGEST HOT SHOTS.

Which driver has the hottest girlfriend or wife?

CARL EDWARDS: Definitely me. I can't answer that without pissing off my girlfriend [former Olympic swimmer Amanda Beard].

JAMIE McMURRAY: That's trouble. If I say something, the next time I'm around the guy, he'll be like, "You want to hook up with my wife?"

CASEY MEARS: Michael Waltrip's wife, Buffy, is well-known in the paddock for being a pretty lady.

Who's the dirtiest driver?

KYLE BUSCH: Robby Gordon. He'll block you all the time. He's going for the win even if he's eight laps down.

McMURRAY: Probably Gordon. A lot of times it's because he doesn't have a tremendous amount to lose.

KEVIN HARVICK: I think we all are, in our own little ways. It's not like there's one guy who wouldn't do anything he needed to do to win the race.

What's the best party city?

BUSCH: I'm not supposed to answer that; I'm not 21 yet.

RYAN NEWMAN: I enjoy the places where I get to go fishing like Michigan and Pennsylvania. Places other people think are boring.

McMURRAY: South Beach. All the girls stay up all night long.

What's the most creative cheat you've heard of?

McMURRAY: I've gotten busted, so I can tell you: I've taped lead to my body when I do weigh-in so I weigh more. Then your car gets to weigh less.

MEARS: Back in the Indy Car days in the '70s, guys ran hidden nitrous lines within fuel lines. It added horsepower and speed.

Have you ever had a fender bender off the track?

McMURRAY: I was 16 and working as a bag boy. I was late to work and hit a lady with her 90-year-old mom in the passenger seat.

EDWARDS: Just this year I backed my motor home into a parked vehicle at one mile per hour. I felt pretty dumb.

NEWMAN: I was 17 and going way too fast on my way to a winter dance. I hit some ice, spun and then drove right into the side of a parked car. It did no damage to my '71 T-Bird but did $2,600 damage to a 1991 Caprice Classic. I had a tux on and everything. The dance was all right.

THE AUTO-RACING WORLD IS BECOMING DECIDEDLY LESS WHITE-BREAD. ENJOY THE RIDE.

ON THE HOOD

If Carrot Top's face can be on a race-car hood, why not 50 Cent's, N.E.R.D's or LeBron James'? Bill Lester, NASCAR's only black driver, cruised with N.E.R.D on his truck, while 50 rocked a hood in a U.K. series and LeBron had a cameo with Bobby Labonte.

STAND-UP GUY

Cedric the Entertainer is the co-owner of an open-wheel Champ car and will add some much-needed color to next year's celebrity race in Long Beach, California. (Last year's champ was Frankie Muniz.)

GET WITH THE PROGRAM

Besides throwing a free Bow Wow concert and rounding up Wyclef Jean and Nick Cannon to draw in fans, NASCAR is also intent on developing minority racers with their Drive for Diversity program.

FAMILY MATTERS

This isn't a gag from White Chicks 2. The Wayans brothers are forming STAR Motorsports and plan to field teams in the Nextel Cup. Start getting used to announcers mangling references to I'm Gonna Git You, Sucka!

Marlon Wayans has a need for speed.

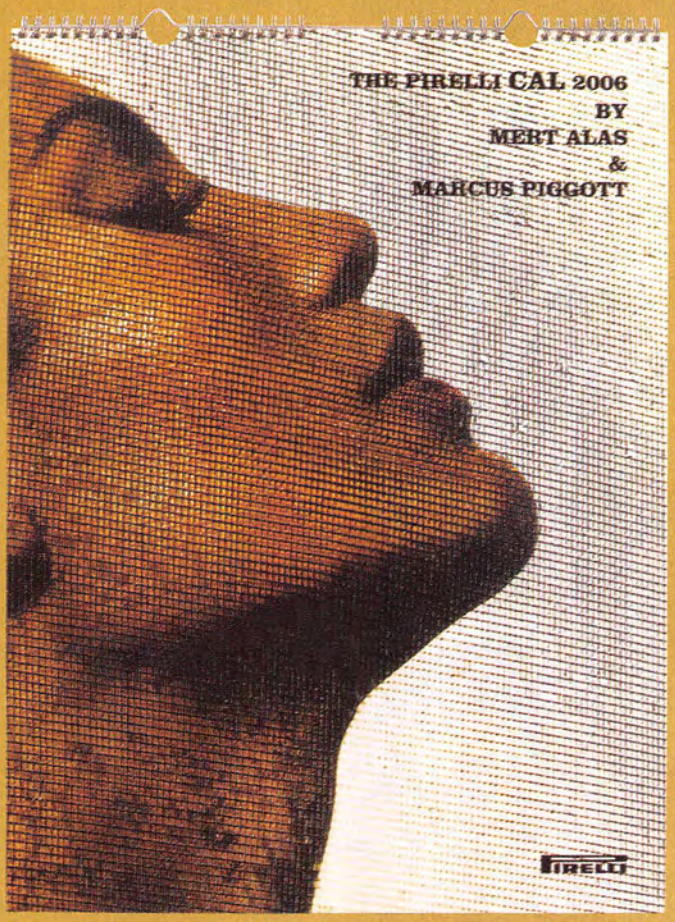
THE WOMEN OF PIRELLI



BECOME A VIP WITH AN EXCLUSIVE LOOK AT THIS WORLD-FAMOUS CALENDAR.

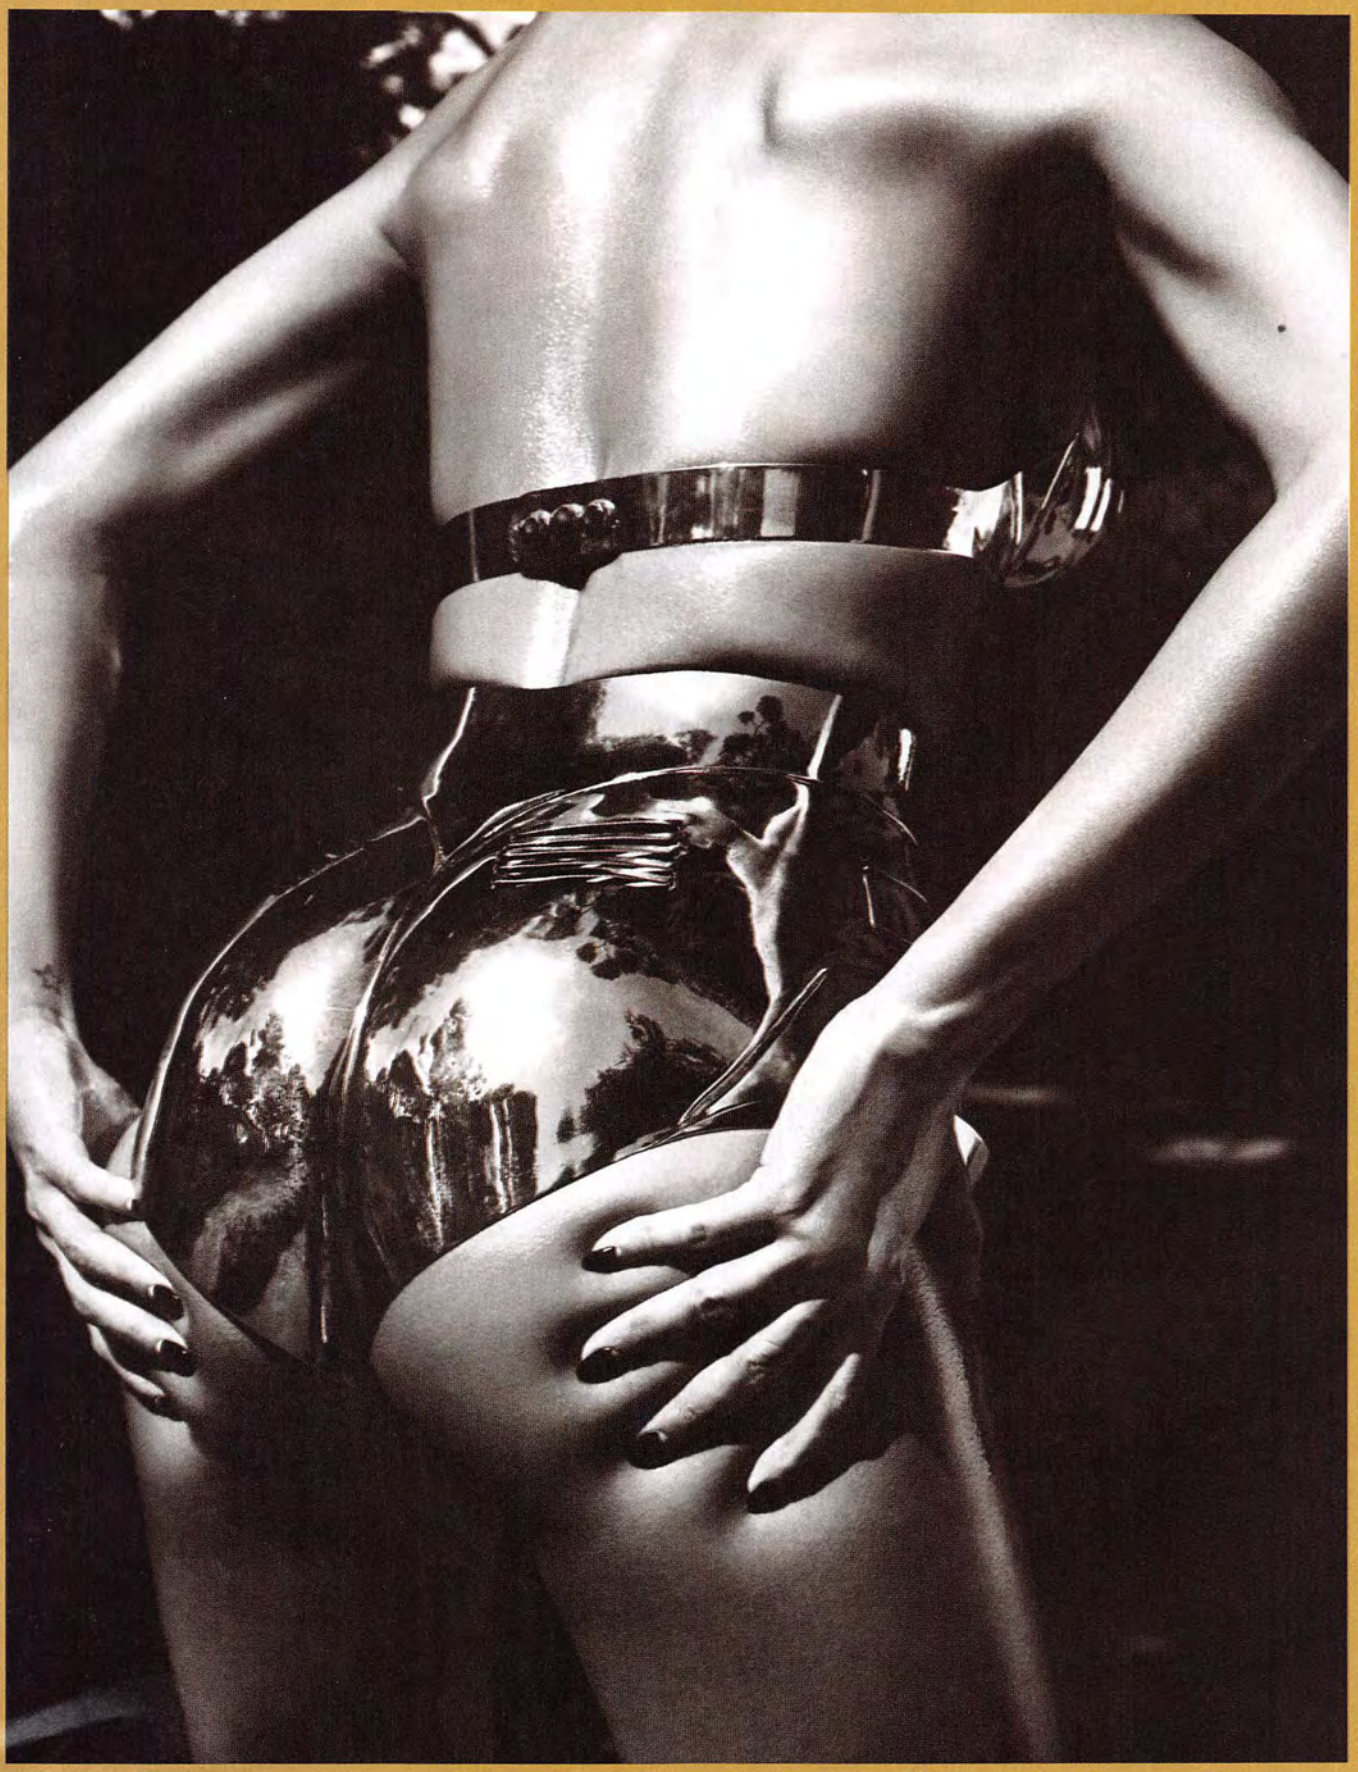
Started in 1964 as a gift to the tire company's clients, the Pirelli calendar is renowned for its gorgeous photos of famous women who pose provocatively for the best photographers in the business. This year's might be the best yet, as Jennifer Lopez, Gisele Bündchen, Kate Moss and others strip down to next to nothing in the name of art. So soak up this sneak peek now, because you can't buy the Pirelli anywhere.

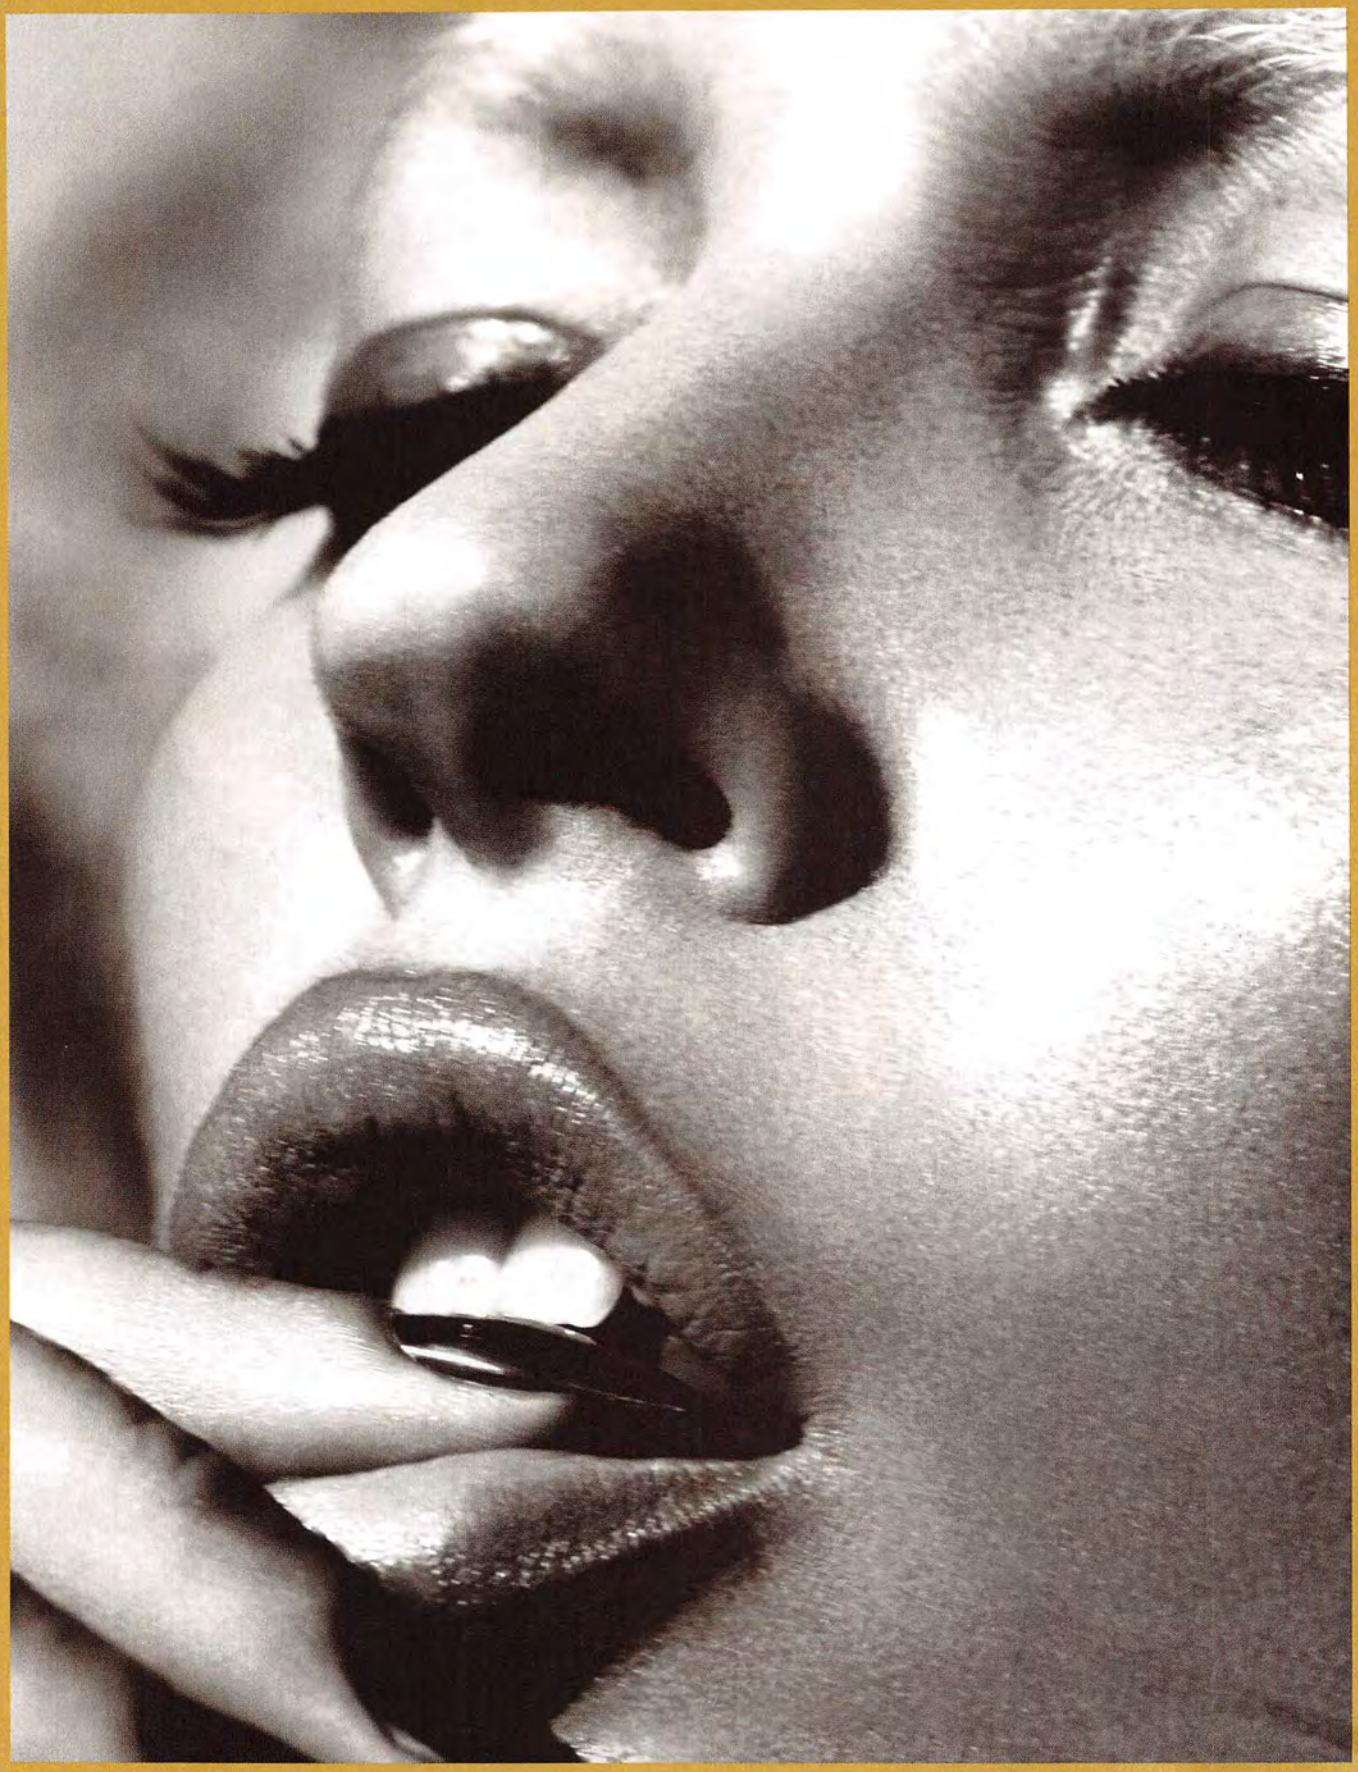
2006

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MERT ALAS AND MARCUS PIGGOTT

GISELE BÜNDCHEN

A former VH1/Vogue Model of the Year, this career cover girl is making her first Pirelli appearance in five years. She's graced the cover of almost every fashion rag in existence.





KATE MOSS

Her recent travails show no signs of slowing down her career. Moss is still one of the most salivated-over models in the world, and she even had a special edition of W devoted to her a few years ago. She hasn't posed for Pirelli since 1994.

JENNIFER LOPEZ

J.Lo might be lighting up the big screen with America's Darlings and El Cantante, but now she's returning to her roots—namely, looking gorgeous—in her Pirelli debut.

THE GODFATHER

IGGY POP

Punk's founding father isn't always shirtless and bloody. (Just most of the time.)

STUFF: You have a very unique style. Did you ever plot out what it would be?
IGGY: No, but I certainly thought a lot about what the clothes said. The first time I appeared onstage with the Stooges, I was wearing golf shoes, a maternity dress and an afro wig that I made out of a shower cap and Reynolds Wrap. It made sense at the time.
What percentage of the day are you shirtless?
Probably 85 percent.
What would you wear if you had put on a bunch of weight as you got older?
I've got a collection of Iggy and the Stooges T-shirts, so I've kind of got that going.
It's hard to imagine Iggy Pop wearing an Iggy Pop shirt. That's just bizarre.
I guess once I don't look like Iggy Pop anymore it'll be cool, but so far I still look like me. I had an uncomfortable point in my career where I used to get mistaken on airplanes for Tom Petty, Neil Young or Sammy Hagar, which is really bad.
Name one fashion trend in music that pisses you off.
I hate assholes in ties.
Do things still get crazy on the road?
It gets crazy onstage. Offstage, I have one glass of wine. While I'm drinking it, someone peels my clothes off. They put dry clothes on me, and I have a second glass and start to babble. That lasts about a half-hour, and then I pass out.

GRILL MASTER

PAUL WALL

H-town's new star blinds us with all the shine coming from his mouth.

STUFF: You design grills for your retail store, TV Jewelry. How did you start doing that?
PAUL: Through this grill designer named Crime. When my music started picking up, I left the gold teeth alone. I jumped back into it right before Lil Jon asked me to design his. Lil Jon was the first celebrity I made a grill for, but at that time, he was just starting out on the rap scene. That's what got me back into it.
Do you think the grill makes the man?
It doesn't, because it's removable. It's just another piece of jewelry. That's something I had to realize a while back when I lost my first grill. I was devastated, and it made me realize the importance I put on it. That's when I realized: The grill doesn't make me—I make the grill.
What about your personal style?
Everything I do is real simple. I always wore Reeboks because, as a kid, my mom wouldn't buy me the expensive Jordans or Air Force 1's. So all I could buy were the $30 pair of Reeboks.
Give us some style advice.
You gotta be yourself. If something's hot, it's hot. There's nothing wrong with wearing what's hot. Like Bathing Ape shoes. Man, they're hot.
But you don't ever wear those.
No, I just wear Reeboks.

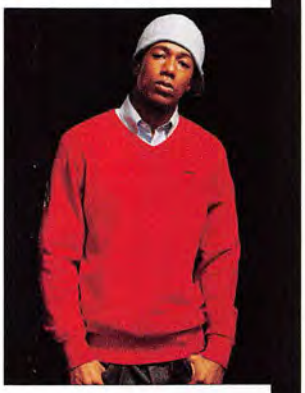
POP YA COLLAR



NICK CANNON

The new hardest-working man in show business isn't afraid to get stylish.

STUFF: You act, produce, direct, write, rap...is there anything you can't do? Have you thought about curing cancer?
NICK: [Laughs] I'm working on that in my spare time.
What do you wear on a typical night out?
I would definitely have on some bright color. And I like my accessories to cost more than my major articles of clothing. The jeans are affordable, the shirt's affordable, but the tie can pay your rent. [Laughs] The hat can be Louis Vuitton, but everything else you can get at Target.
What's the oldest thing in your closet?
I have a lot of old hats. This is the funniest thing: My grandfather is, like, 69 years old, but he thinks he's 16. He's rocking my favorite hat. He wears all my clothes. My grandfather looks like a Sean John model.
What's the gaudiest thing in your wardrobe?
I've had the $100,000 Jacob watches, but I kind of let that go. But I've got diamond cuff links that I wear all the time.
Did you put the watch on eBay or something?
I just put it to the side. What do you do with a $100,000 watch when you're done with it?
Give it to us! Also, give us one piece of style advice.
Make a statement. That's what clothing is really for.

RICO SUAVE

DANNY MASTERSON

The star of That '70s Show steps into this decade.

STUFF: How did you get along with Nick and Iggy?
DANNY: We danced around like little queens. We decided I was going to wear Nick's gear and he was going to wear my suits. Then I showed my cock instead of Iggy always showing his. [Laughs]

You spin as DJ Donkey Pizzle. How the hell did you get that name?
I took that name because I didn't want to be taken too seriously. All of my friends are, like, the illest DJs, so I didn't want to be that actor guy trying to get up on their tip. I figured that having a goofy name would make people realize that.

Tell us about the jazz night you host at Guy's in L.A.
Cool people come in suits, and the girls get all dressed up. It's a little ode to Harlem, back in the day. There's nothing like that in L.A.; that's why we wanted to do it.

Has jazz night inspired your style at all?
No. I wear suits pretty much twice a week, so my everyday wear is Ben Sherman with a pair of Air Force 1's. I also like to wear old grandfather shirts—short-sleeve button-downs with pockets—and a pair of thin corduroys.

What's the new trucker hat?
People are wearing vests a lot recently. I'm trying to bring back mustaches. I'm inspired by Weird Al Yankovic. He went hard with the mustache. I'm trying to bite off his style a little bit.

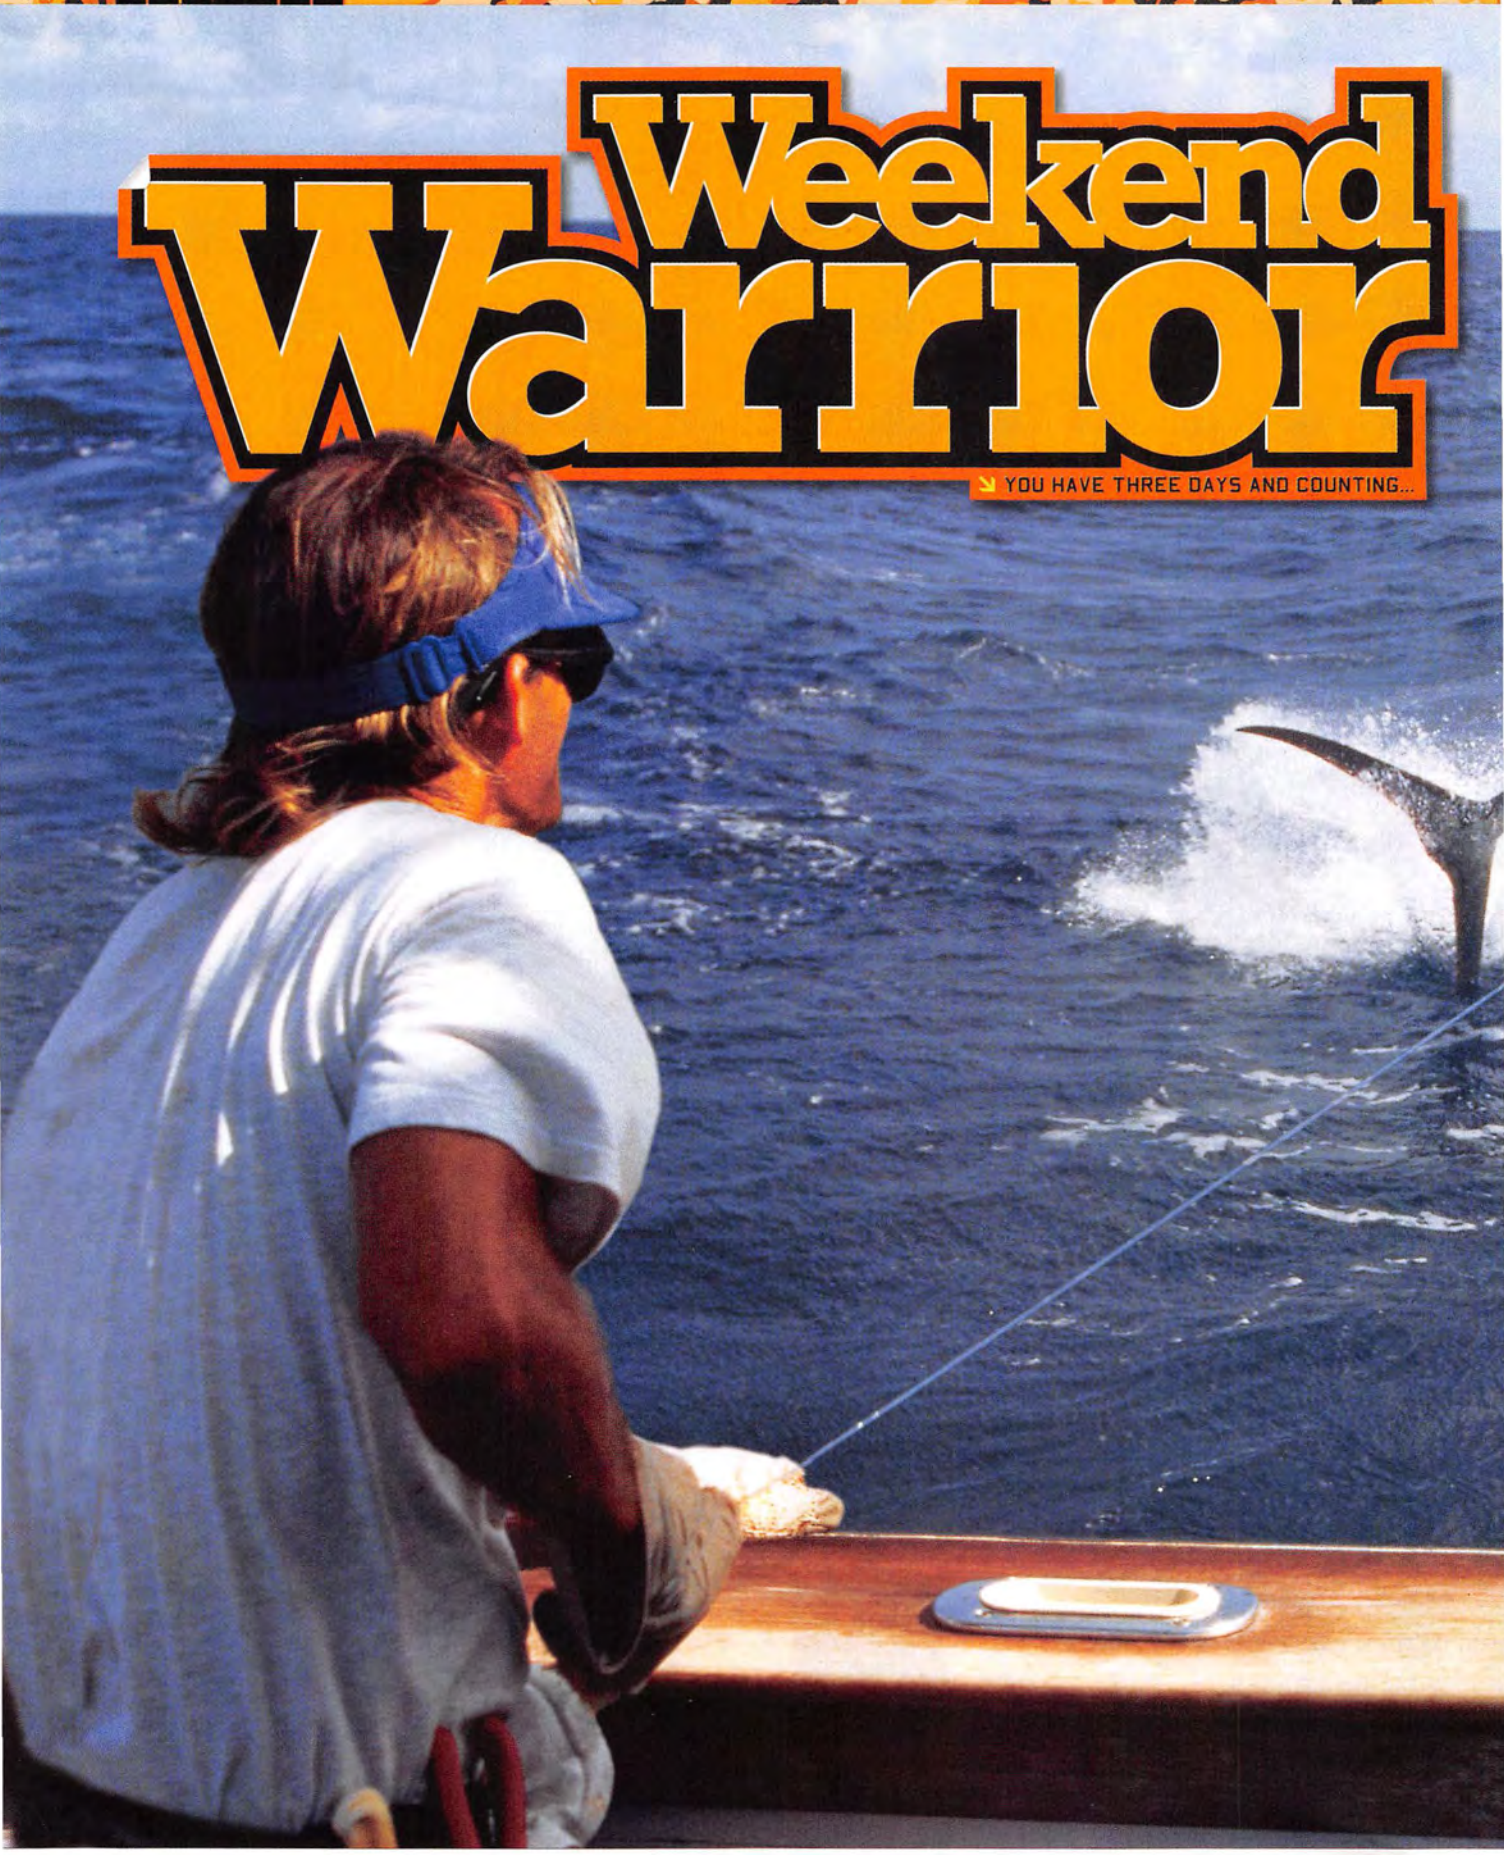
YOU HAVE THREE DAYS AND COUNTING...



If only he could reel in a decent barber.

DEEP-SEA HOOKUP!

WHERE YOU CAN CATCH AND STUFF YOUR ALL-TIME BIGGEST...AND NOT HAVE TO SNEAK HER OUT OF YOUR ROOM IN THE MORNING.

CABO SAN LUCAS, MEXICO

If you didn't get banned from Mexico after that Spring Break debacle, it's time to plan a fishing trip to Cabo. The boats are cheap, and the only catch more popular than blue marlin is crabs.

SKUNKED? TRY... The Giggling Marlin, 011-52-624-143-0606

BIMINI, BAHAMAS

Tiny island chains like Bimini are what inspired iconic fisherman and boozehound Ernest Hemingway to write The Old Man and the Sea. This place is to tuna fishing what Bordeaux is to wine, so get your connoisseur on.

SKUNKED? TRY... Compleat Angler Bar, 011-242-347-3122

MADEIRA, PORTUGAL

Thanks to a warming trend in the North Atlantic, the marlin numbers in Madeira are way up. In fact, the fishing is so off the hook (pun intended) that people scoff at anything under 700 pounds.

SKUNKED? TRY... Doca do Cavacas, 011-351-291-762-057

CAIRNS, AUSTRALIA

Ever hooked into a Volkswagen with gills? The famous black marlin of Cairns routinely hit the 1,000-pound mark. Read that again and head straight to the gym, because these fish fight like hell.

SKUNKED? TRY... Barnacle Bills, 011-61-7-4051-2241

DUTCH HARBOR, ALASKA

Halibut is the most delicious thing in scales since the Little Mermaid, and the grizzly local fishermen here refer to the biggest ones (which can grow to 500 pounds) as "barn doors." Can you guess why?

SKUNKED? TRY... The Unisea Sports Bar, 907-581-7246

KONA, HAWAII

The waters off the Kona coast might be famously calm and glossy, but don't get lulled to sleep: This makes for some of the best mahi mahi fishing (and girl-watching) conditions in the known universe.

SKUNKED? TRY... Durty Jake's Café & Bar, 808-329-7366

LOS SUEÑOS, COSTA RICA

In big-game fishing terminology, a grand slam is what happens when an angler hooks a swordfish, a sailfish and a marlin all in one day. And let's just say the bases are always loaded in Los Sueños.

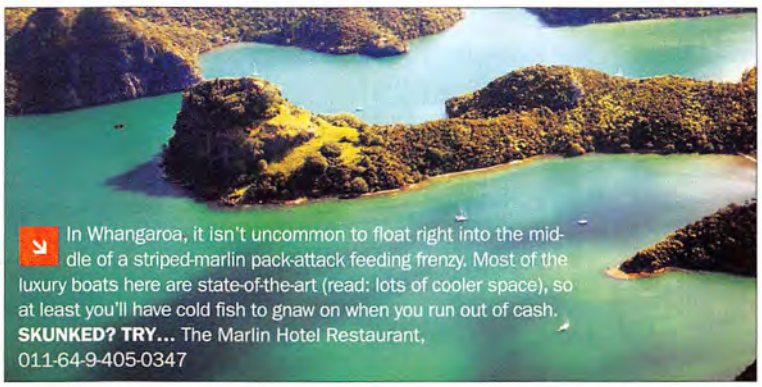
SKUNKED? TRY... The Hook-Up, 011-506-637-8284

ANDAMAN ISLANDS, INDIA

The Andaman Islands are home to some of the last stone-age peoples on earth. They're also a watery hot spot for black and blue marlin, hence India's decision to blast some of 'em open to tourism.

SKUNKED? TRY... The Fortune Resort Bar, 011-91-3192-234101

WHANGAROA, BAY OF ISLANDS, NEW ZEALAND



In Whangaroa, it isn't uncommon to float right into the middle of a striped-marlin pack-attack feeding frenzy. Most of the luxury boats here are state-of-the-art (read: lots of cooler space), so at least you'll have cold fish to gnaw on when you run out of cash.

HERE'S THE GEAR—NOW GO LEARN HOW TO CAST.

01 YO-ZURI LURES / $18–$34
Yo-Zuri makes lures that are roughly the size of your forearm and have razor-sharp hooks bigger than your thumbs. Why? Because the fish they target are scaly monsters of epic proportions. Tie your knots tight. yo-zuri.com

02 CHAOS ST 50-100 STAND-UP TROLLING ROD / $250
You wouldn't go moose hunting with a pellet gun, would you? The same applies to big-game fishing, and the sturdy fiberglass ST 50-100 is the AK-47 of rods. Game, set, catch. chaosfishing.com

03 AVET T-RX 50W QUAD REEL / $999
Nicknamed the T-Rex, this softball-size reel delivers a swift uppercut to the jaws of unsuspecting fish. Not to mention how well the baby-blue aluminum brings out the color in your eyes. avetreels.com

04 HUMMINBIRD SMARTCAST RF30 / $100
The SmartCast RF30 is a high-tech sonar wrist mount that locates fish underwater with a small transducer attached to the end of your line. Just don't expect it to fillet them for you. hummingbird.com

05 SHIMANO TIAGRA 130 REEL / $1,200
We don't know if Suge Knight likes to fish, but this is what he would use if he did. The Tiagra 130 is as big as a basketball, and it's guaranteed to strike fear into the hearts of Nemo and his pals. shimano.com

SUPERSICK STREET STUNTS!

BECAUSE SPINNING IS THE NEW SPEEDING.

Let's get something straight: Getting road head on an icy overpass does not qualify as stunt driving. No, stunt driving involves dicey vehicular maneuvers of a different nature, and you can master them all at Bobby Ore Motorsports. Warm up in the beginners' course ($1,500) with evasive slalom techniques and controlled 90-degree slides before graduating to the advanced lesson (another $1,500), where you'll learn the finer points of Bruckheimer-style car chases and high-speed forward and reverse 180s. You can put the school's Ford Escorts and Mustangs to the test, and the weekend-long classes are offered throughout the year at locations in California and Florida. Now, if only you could figure out how to parallel park....

HOW TO DO A REVERSE 180

Going through tollbooths just got fun again.

1 Put the car in reverse and focus your eyes straight ahead. Hit the gas slowly and back up.

2 Floor it, cut the wheel 90 degrees and switch gears into drive. Try to keep your pants unsoiled.

3 As the car swings around, hit the gas again. Then high-five your buddies and/or hostages.

Pontius and Steve-O ride Tijuana's hottest whores.

El Trouser Snake-o was in trouble.

The red inflammation had spread from their testicles.

TRAVELS WITH PONTIUS

PARTY BOY DESCRIBES THE SIGHTS, SMELLS AND MORE SMELLS OF TIJUANA, MEXICO.

If you want to party, Tijuana wants you. So a few months ago, I headed south with my friends Kai, Jorge and Steve-O. As we crossed the border, I made a mental list of the things I wanted to see during our visit.

1 Wrestling
2 Drugs and alcohol
3 Whorehouses

The first thing we did was get some fish tacos. The girls who worked at the taco stand were pretty, and if I were them, I would quit and work in a brothel. In a way, they'd still be serving tacos. When I was a kid, I always said that if I were a girl, I'd be a total slut. Now that I'm older and wiser, I'd be a whore instead. If I'm gonna be having tons of sex, I might as well get paid for it!

Next we hit Tijuana's red-light district. It's like Amsterdam in that all of the brothels are legal and the girls get regular medical checkups. And don't worry if you can't get an erection because you are nervous or have had too much to drink (or because you are going back for seconds or thirds)—all the shops sell Viagra over the counter.

As we walked down the street, we passed about 30 ladies dressed as Catholic schoolgirls. They would say "Chi-chi" and grab our butts and tallywackers. I felt like a piece of meat—it was rad!

We went into Adelita Bar, which is probably TJ's most famous brothel. It reminds me of that bar in From Dusk Till Dawn, the Titty Twister. You feel like you're in the Wild West. Even if you aren't looking for any grab-ass, whorehouses are a great place to have a few beers with your pals.

NO NOSE, NO PROBLEM

Next Jorge took us to a place he referred to as the Drug Bar. He called it this because they sell all kinds of drugs there. Right when we walked in, we met the owner. He must have done lots of drugs, because he didn't have a nose. Instead, he wore this weird plastic one. Everyone in the place was dancing twice as fast as the music, so I figured methamphetamine must have been the special that night. As much fun as we were having watching people casually smoke crack while playing pool, we realized that the wrestling matches were about to begin, so we left for the arena.

A local girl is the meat in a gringo sandwich.

BRING THE PAIN

We arrived just in time for a triple-tag-team match. A lot of people say that wrestling is fake, and I will tell you right now, for the record, in Mexico it's very real. I sat ringside and heard the brutal punches and headbutts connecting. I saw chairs smashed over bare skulls. It was a bloodbath, and it drove every man, woman and child in the arena wild. It really put us in the mood to party even harder.

"ALL THE SHOPS SELL VIAGRA OVER THE COUNTER."

So after the wrestling, we headed down to a lesbian bar. The place was packed. I gazed around the room, watching the girls slow dancing and French kissing. Women seem to be so much more versatile than men when it comes to sex. I've known quite a few girls who have gotten tired of being screwed over by guys and gone out with chicks instead. Can you imagine if one of your bros who you hadn't talked with in a while was like, "Yeah, I'm totally done getting fucked over by bitches. From now on, I'm stickin' with dudes"?

As we left for home, I wondered if the brothels served female customers. Do women pay other women for sex? A lot of those working girls are pretty hot—way hotter than the girls at the lesbian bar. It would be worth the money. But I didn't see any lesbians marching out of the brothels, zipping up their pants and licking their lips. I guess women in Tijuana just aren't like me.

30-Day Supply $39.95

TRX™ A Testosterone Enhancer For Producing Massive Results!

As reported in the cover story of the January 19, 2004 TIME magazine (page 72) testosterone is the #1 factor that determines your sexual desire and your ability to perform in the bedroom. TRX is a revolutionary, all-natural, doctor designed and endorsed formula that many medical experts are calling the most powerful testosterone pre-cursor and enhancer ever without a prescription.

WARNING: Please use TRX only if you want to: be infused with intense passion and desire; experience extreme stamina and performance; produce monstrous erections; establish a beastly reputation for giving ultimate satisfaction again and again.

30-Day Supply $39.95

LAVA™ Natural Libido Enhancer For Women Will Set Her On Fire!

LAVA For Women is a fast-acting (use only with her permission) doctor-designed passion formula to help quickly stimulate female desire, performance, and ultimate satisfaction over and over again. You'll find the results irresistible as she erupts and overflows with intense pleasure.

30-Day Supply $39.95

BRAIN
To show she can do more than just teeny-bopper movies, her next three projects are serious independent films.

NOSE
Contrary to rumors, she insists she has never snorted cocaine. She has admitted, however, that she's tried pot and "hated it."

BREASTS
It is rumored that they were digitally shrunk for Herbie: Fully Loaded after parents at test screenings thought they were too raunchy for a children's movie.

BUTT
Her booty stays bouncy with a steady diet of swimming, rollerblading and gymnastics.

FEET
Puma and Nike are her favorite kicks to wear while running into the arms of older men.

LINDSAY LOHAN

THINK YOU KNOW EVERYTHING ABOUT HER? OBSERVE AS WE EXAMINE THE BRAIN, BOOBS AND BIZARRE FAMILY OF THE WORLD'S HOTTEST TEENAGER.

$100

Starting bid on eBay for a headlight from her Mercedes, which came off in her latest car accident. At press time, there were no bidders.

"SOME ARTICLE SAID I WAS A BAD INFLUENCE ON HER, BECAUSE SHE WAS GOING OUT AND GOING CRAZY. BUT LINDSAY LOHAN IS WAY MORE WILD THAN I WAS WHEN I WAS HER AGE. DON'T PUT ME WITH HER—I DON'T WANT TO BE DRAGGED INTO HER SHIT."
—TARA REID

EATING DISORDER?

While she denies that she has an eating disorder ("I love food"), others disagree. Check out the online petition feedlindsay.com.
